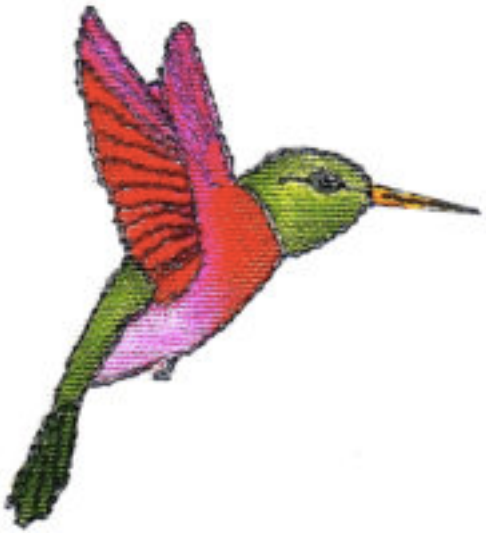
Project Peace & Love

Kathleen Mary Willis



In the spring of 2012, well before Archangel Michael had asked us to dream big, I had an idea to help change the world.

Through personal readings with Linda Dillon, I'd been told I was a transmuter so I started transmuting things.

Being a member of the Bridge Fund, and on the board of the Hope Chest, I was working with (conceptual) money knowing that there were many changes to come in the banking system.

I began, almost everyday, to transmute money on the planet. I was seeing all money as the energy of Love, peace and joy, golden energy flowing from the higher realms into the banks, and golden rainbows flowing between the banks.

I found a large flat rock down by the ocean that I would walk down to. I'd stand on it to transmute all energy on Gaia not of love, to Love, peace, joy.

I'd run old energy through my heart, standing on my rock, gazing out at the ocean.

I did this for almost three years until a new way of transmuting started where I sat in my chair.

The summer of 2014, I put together a handbook called Chakras as Portals - an Ascension guide, for the Mother - with Her Universal Laws, Blessings, Virtues and the dimensional growth patterns that correlate with the 13-chakra system that the Council of Love teaches.

That handbook was created because of my desire for Love, peace and joy for all on Gaia. From that I created a website, Voice of Freedom, for the Divine Information.

The end of October and early November, 2014, Steve and I drove from the Council of Love Conference in Lake Tahoe, down through California to San Diego, and then up the entire west coast back to Vancouver, Canada.

While we were in California, the drought was very apparent and I asked Linda Dillon if she could channel a meditation for rain.

Archangel Uriel came through with a meditation to help with our self-mastery as well as the spiritual, mental and emotional drought of humanity and the physical drought on Gaia, beginning in California.

In December 2014, Archangel Michael asked Steve to co-create peace on Gaia with humanity by Valentine's Day (exactly which year wasn't stipulated).

Due to planetary unrest, I recently asked Steve if I could call out to the readership of the Golden Age of Gaia for a one week, daily, 9PM meditation, starting with our ongoing Sunday 9PM peace meditation.

From that request has come about a co-creation, with the higher realms, called Project Peace & Love.

Our ongoing Rain of Love meditation with Archangel Uriel and Archangel Michael's Breath of Peace meditations are both a part of Project Peace & Love. The rain meditation happens on Saturdays, 3:15 PM, wherever you are on Gaia.

Our individual joy is a part of this as well, our sacred purpose, our co-creation with the higher realms for peace and Love on Gaia for humanity.

Starting tomorrow:

Sunday, April 23rd, then every evening until April 30th, at 9PM

8 minutes, either standing or sitting

Holding Love and joy in our hearts, allowing Archangel Michael's Blue Breath of Peace to pass through us to humanity

(If you are standing, be sure to have something to hold onto as the energy can be very strong.)

Thank you so much for joining in.

Project Peace & Love

When there are billions holding the energy of the only acceptable reality

being peace and love,

then peace will reign.

AAM to Lightworkers on Love and Peace

Kathleen Mary Willis

We asked Archangel Michael to kick-off our Peace and Love Week of meditations on peace and transmissions of love to the world.

Here's what he wishes us to know and consider.

Steve Beckow: Kathleen has begun the Peace and Love Project. Its first event is a week-long meditation on peace and lightworker transmissions of love out to the world.

Could you help us with a message to Lightworkers on what we collaboratively can achieve through collective meditations and love transmissions, please?

Archangel Michael: You can achieve the opening to the interior doorway to your heart. (1) So think of it this way, sweet ones.

All lightworkers and loveholders tend to think – and, in certain situations, it is true – that there are multiple doorways in terms of this undertaking to create peace and love and harmony upon this planet at this immediate time.

Think not of your heart as a series of portals or doorways, not as a revolving door, not as a trap door, but as a singular door through which the winds of change, the love of All can flow through.

It is a mutuality that you share the love and receive the love, that there is input and output. This is the infinite balance that our blessed Mother speaks of and teaches. It is the infinite balance of her paradigm and of her pattern.

So it is not simply about sending love out into the planet, out into the universe. It is in equal measure, every day, receiving the love and feeling that love within you that is the bright spark of the eternal One. (2)

So bring it into balance and in so doing, you're bringing it into balance for the planet as well.

Steve: What is the relationship between love and peace, Lord?

AAM: Think of them as expressions. If you do not have the love, if you are not the love, then there can be no experience, no expression, no feeling of peace. When there is an absence of love, there is a constancy of yearning, of striving. Not only the quietude but the jubilation of peace, cannot be present.

Similarly, think of them as intertwined. When there is peace, when there is that knowing, not only of external peace, but of the deep knowing of your sense of self and your self-worth. That allows the love to arrive, to rise up within you, to swell, to be felt, to be experienced and shared. (3)

There is so much that I would share and yet ultimately what I would guide you is to truly engage. This is not about simply giving love lip service.

There are many, too many, who give love lip service but do not truly engage in the love, both within and in their outer world and relationships in their everyday undertakings.

We ask you, on behalf of this entire Council of Love, to truly engage in the Love, quietly, outrageously, verbally, silently; engage, my friends. That is our request of thee.

Footnotes

(1) If by this he means a heart opening, oh my gosh. Hallelujah!

(2) Michael acknowledges that love comes from the soul hidden in the heart.

(3) He lays out here the flow of love: How love arrives at the heart, rises within it, is felt going through us, and then is shared with the world.

What One Person Can Do

Steve Beckow

While I was focussed on Global Love Day, May 1, Kathleen Willis was praying for peace. So we decided to combine our efforts.

Kathleen has established the "Peace and Love Project," to spur all of us on in transmitting our love to the world, to bring about world peace.

She describes her divine intention:

> "Archangel Michael entreats us to send the energy of Love and Peace from our hands, from our heart, from our very being 'to all who cower in the dark night of the soul, praying for relief and peace.'" (1)

To promote her work, she's organized a week of love transmissions and peace meditations.

The love transmissions are designed to have us collectively send our love where it's needed, (A) to relieve drought and (B) to strengthen the desire for peace in the world and the actual condition of peace.

The peace meditations are to strengthen our own experience of inner peace and extend that out into the collective consciousness.

As it turns out, I've experienced real peace – Fifth-Dimensional peace – briefly, on one occasion. (2) Not the ordinary stop-fussing-and-sit-still kind of peace but deep, deep peace, the peace that the Natural Self is.

Having experienced that for however short a time, how can I not want to support her work for love and peace?

I'll be contributing as many articles as I can. But what seems to me the main work, I confess I don't know how to accomplish.

For the last half year, I've blanched at the task of somehow conveying how sacred love differs from ordinary love (5D from 3D). I haven't been able to accomplish it.

I blanch as well now at the prospect of conveying how sacred peace differs from ordinary peace (5D from 3D). I cannot find the words for it.

My experience of the deep peace of the Natural Self was fleeting, even if it left an indelible impression on me.

But once I returned to everyday consciousness, my pen was no longer up to the task of describing what I experienced in the higher state of consciousness that real peace is.

All I'm left being able to do is to say "Not this! Not this! Something different. Something wayyyyyy bigger."

There's a depth to peace which the Divine Mother and Archangel Michael – and in fact all of the Company of Heaven – are regularly pointing at, which lies outside our normal knowing.

While the world as a whole can come together on ending external war, the condition of much greater impact for each of us, as lightworkers know, is the advent of inner peace. Our inner peace, our love, our joy are our spiritual currency. How rich in love and peace are we?

Yes, stop the war in the world. But, much more importantly, stop the war in our hearts.

Declare our "within" to be the only domain we have sway over: Our very own self. Then declare ourselves at peace. That will end whatever wars we have going on inside. And, as Kathleen has pointed out in the past, what happens within is then projected without.

While the first type of peace (external peace) is undoubtedly a godsend, the second (internal peace) transcends all considerations of comfort, all dilemmas. For as long as the experience lasts (and after final Ascension it'll be permanent), it sweeps away all concerns and satisfies completely.

What's the potential impact of work like Kathleen's? Jesus through John Smallman tells us:

> "The many ongoing international meditations for world peace are very powerful for two reasons: first, because the greater the percentage of humanity meditating with the intent that the Tsunami of Love enter every heart the more powerful is the energy flow, and second, when you hold this intent and intend to join with all others who are holding similar intentions, you, too, are able to open your own hearts far more fully to receive the abundance of Love that vigilantly awaits your invitation to suffuse you completely." (3)

Kathleen didn't wait for the Reval to begin her work. She just began it. Tabernacle!

The Divine Mother on Translating Love into World Peace

Steve Beckow

As the Peace and Love Project focuses our efforts towards Global Love Day (May 1), transmitting love to the world and meditating on peace, the Divine Mother provides us with a "how to," to go about building a new world of love in form.

My question to the Mother on An Hour with an Angel was how does one take the love that we feel, that she calls our spiritual currency, and translate it into world peace. She offered this helpful response.

Divine Mother: This is where we get into the business of spiritual currency. When I have said earlier this day that you are just at the tip of the iceberg — I do not say this to demean you; quite the contrary, I say it to encourage you — you are the tip of the iceberg in terms of your power to create.

And you do not need to go to Iraq or Somalia or Papua to bring this about. Now, many of you do this every night with Michael. And you do go to the places not only of war but simply heart-broken places. Many of you are in the slums of Chicago or Calcutta.

Use my gifts. I spoke to you last week of bringing them to your heart and pulling them up. (1)

Now I call upon clarity. Call upon charity and send it. It is part of love. Call upon grace and send it.

Do not engage in the drama. Simply know, it is as if you have one of those Jedi swords and you are inserting with laser light into the situation and cutting through the illusion, and, as you are cutting through it, you are inserting the love.

Every day, you have people who say, “I woke up this morning and I feel different. I don’t know why.” But we do, and you do.

Know that you do not do this [work] alone. You do it in concert with all the mighty ones, with the masters, with your star brothers and sisters, who are very active in this peace movement, more active than you can possibly imagine.

And, dear heart, my Tsunami is not merely for those who acknowledge me. It is for every human being, every grain of sand, every atom of water.

Now, the kingdoms are taken care of. They are there. You go etherically. You can be in many places at once.

Send yourself and your love and bring the peace, knowing that when you go you are already in sacred union with us, and sacred union with the recalcitrant, the reluctant, the aberrant.

You are going to love them into submission. And if they never know your name or from whence you came, it matters not, because you have gone into the fray, and you are doing my bidding. And your service is not unrecognized.

It is so deeply appreciated. And yes, sweet angels, rewarded.

Love grows. Love is contagious. It can destroy those who would wage war. It can destroy AIDS or Ebola. Send it. And send it in my name.

Go with my love and go in peace, sweet angels. Call me, because I am calling you. The Blessing and Virtue of Joy

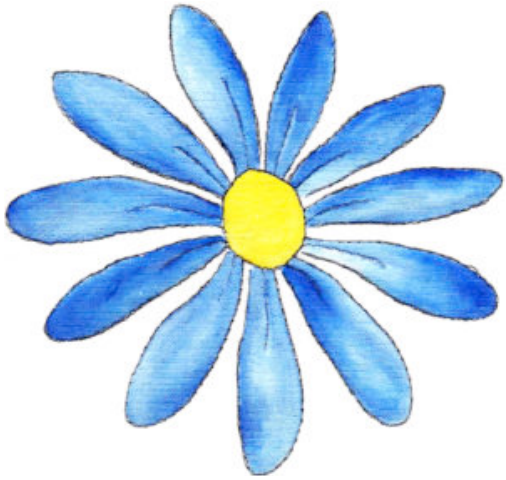
Kathleen Mary Willis



Joy is a blessing and a virtue with abilities and senses, but it is also a quality, a constant state of being — the truth of Who We Are.

Joy is within us. When we expand, access, and grow our joy, our truth expands within that.

Archangel Gabrielle helps us to understand joy, through Linda Dillon, channel for the Council of Love:

> "You are the substance of love and the matter of Joy. You are the embodiment of that essence of laughter and the tinkling of gladness, the song of freedom. All of these are interwoven as one, interwoven uniquely into your tapestry and into your being." (1)

As we expand into our wholeness, we find in our reality there is enormous joy -- never ending -- Infinite, Eternal joy.

This doesn't mean that as we witness the disintegration of the old Third Dimension, we won't feel pain, but with expanded awareness of our wholeness -- our truth -- we're beginning to understand and know that wellspring of joy within, that ocean of golden radiance to drink, to call upon, that nourishes us.

Gratitude cannot be separated from joy.

In gratitude and honoring, when we use the words, I Am, what we are doing is claiming and declaring our Divinity, our Love, peace, joy, our alignment with the I Am.

We are bringing ourselves -- our heart, our consciousness, our mental and emotional bodies, our physical body -- into alignment with our Universal Self, which is our personal I Am.

We can think of it as a straight line into the connection and alignment with the I Am, with Divine Mind, Heart, Will, Presence, Peace, Love, Joy.

Joy is a quality, a constant state of being, just like grace, that we can build and build, a frequency that increases, a vibration that expands in the field around our body.

With practice of the blessings and virtues -- and especially with joy -- our fields expand in vibration and increase in frequency.

As we align with our Divinity, our wholeness, we naturally, spontaneously spread the good news -- the glad-tidings of joy -- with everyone we meet.

With practice, our well-spring of joy becomes contagious!

When we bring conscious awareness and truth to the energy of our old, entrenched beliefs and mental/emotional constructs, our knowing of joy, that Joy Is All, helps us to resolve old issues.

False grids and core issues do not have the expanded vibration and increased frequency, the solidity and substantiality of the Divine Blessings, Virtues and Qualities.

Angst, despair, disappointment never resolve or raise the vibration of what we are in angst about. . .

When we know the truth of joy, its substance, it's easier for us to shift from our addiction to pain -- from the old ways of being -- to remembering and knowing our Divine Alignment with our Universal Selves and The I Am.

Our Universal selves are Love, peace, joy, and anchoring closer and closer in truth.

Being human often brings with it uncomfortable feelings and situations, but joy and truth are within us and always have been.

Joy is our essence, our core, our spark that we can build into a bonfire.

We can think of joy as the golden flame that burns away false grids and core issues.

One of the blessings of joy is understanding that if someone close to us loses their joy — with our knowing of joy and our ability to be joy — we can help restore the one affected, to their joy, their balance.

Joy brings the light to situations, not in denial, but in truth.

Holding the truth of joy, we can raise the vibration of angst, despair, disappointment, of old ways of being.

We also demonstrate our ability to be joy by claiming our birthright of joy.

Joy is clear and gentle, the truth of everyone's being, a strong, viral, healing energy that moves at en-light-ening speed.

The color of joy is gold, deep, olde gold, burnished gold, and gold heals — all parts of our body and of our bodies — our sacred field.

Archangel Gabrielle tells us, when we wish to heal:

> "Fill yourself with my golden elixir for it will permeate every cell, every pore, every organ, your blood, everything, and it renews you. Joy is the anti-aging agent of the century and it makes you beautiful and radiant because there is nothing more beautiful than Joy." (2)

Holding the higher vibrations and frequencies of the blessings and virtues, especially the quality, the constant state of joy — fully thankful, grateful, with the gift of life, purpose, and spirit — we gradually journey toward Ascension, toward the creation of Nova Being and Nova Earth.

We court joy when we live in the heart, remaining there, being a daily reflection of the perfection of Self and All.

Holding the vibration and frequency of joy, we are gratitude for everything.

An Invocation for the Blessing, Virtue and Quality of Joy

I invoke Archangel Gabrielle and the blessing, virtue and quality of joy for greater understanding, Divine Knowing, of the matter of joy.

An Experience of the Breath of Michael

Steve Beckow

The closest of the portraits to how Archangel Michael appeared to me; his hair was brown

Kathleen talks about the "blue breath of Michael." I asked her if I could share an actual experience with you concerning the power of Archangel Michael's breath.

Some of you may have heard the story before and I apologize for repeating it. It concerns one of the two times I came face-to-face with Archangel Michael. (1)

I found myself lucid dreaming. I "woke up" in the dream, aboard a ship, in the lounge. I was listening to some people chat when I heard this mellifluous voice.

I turned in my seat and stared at the stranger sitting across the room from me. (2)

Imagine Keanu Reeves with a ponytail. But more to the point he was the spitting image of someone I knew years earlier - Mark Orich, a street kid I'd been working with in Ottawa who was later murdered in Orange County.

There was an instant flash of visual recognition as well as a fascination with his mellifluous voice. The two combined were irresistible. He had my attention.

I asked, "Are you Archangel Michael?" and he replied "Yes," and I moved all my belongings closer to him to listen to what he had to say.

I cannot remember what was said. What I do remember was that he rose up from his chair and his body below the waist faded into mist.

He floated up and over me until I was horizontal with him, barely a few inches away. (3) He breathed something into me, long and slow. After I had taken it into myself, I woke up.

At the next reading I asked him to explain to me what just happened; specifically, what did he breathe into me? He said he had breathed love into me, so that I'd remember the dream when I woke up.

Oh, I have never forgotten a moment of it. It may be the only dream I can say that about. It's as if it's fixed in my mind. Such is the power of the breath of Michael.

Oh, oh, oh, one more quick share?

It was also Michael who removed the blockage from my heart on March 13, 2015, three hours before I had a reading with him. That was an explosive event and unleashed a torrent of love, like a good volcano or, even better, a tsunami of love. (4)

If we succeed in having the breath of Michael flow through us in service of the Mother, I'd consider us blessed. I'll fully open to it.

Footnotes

(1) On the other occasion, I exited my apartment and had to steer around a young man standing outside the front door and looking engagedly at it. I found it curious that he made no attempt to knock or anything. He just stood there. I walked about eight paces and turned around. He'd disappeared. I asked my wife to drive around the block and we couldn't see him anywhere.

I later confirmed with Michael that that was him. On this occasion, which preceded the other, he also looked like Mark Orich - or Keanu Reeves with a ponytail.

(2) I won't go into it here, but, up to this point, this experience mirrored one I had in an est Communications Workshop in the early Eighties. Again that helped me to relax into it.

(3) I just got how significant this action is for me. When I was seven, my Father shouted at me from just a few inches from my face and I shattered into a thousand pieces. I became the dissociated Humpty Dumpty Man. How healing it was to have Archangel Michael breathe love into me from just a few inches away from my face.

(4) I reserve the words "heart opening" for a torrent-like release of love from the wellspring of the heart, which would be as unmistakeable as watching one's house be torn off its foundations and swept away in a flood. It happened or it didn't. Whether it did or not is so unmistakeable that, when asked if it did, it takes no time to think about it. "Yes!"

It's not just a strong experience of romantic love. Or grief at the loss of a parent. Or even the worship of a sage, as wonderful as that is. The torrent is not at all a form of ordinary love. The Mother calls it "Sacred Love." ("Transcript ~ The Divine Mother: New Year's Message 2017," December 29, 2016, at http://goldenageofgaia.com/2016/12/31/new-years-message-2017/.)

Archangel Michael: When Peace will Reign - Part 1/2

Today we offer Archangel Michael's guidance to us on how peace is to be accomplished and when it will reign.

What is occurring is that the chaos and mayhem, whether it is within your sweet self or across the planet, becomes more abrasive, more obtrusive, more distasteful, because there is no place for it [any longer]...

It is time, sweet brothers and sisters, to set aside, to relinquish completely, any feeling, any experience [that is] what you would think of as less than love. We give you the tools. We offer to fill you up. We offer to create and co-create with thee. Allow us to do so...

Now, one of your questions is, "Michael, how, how do I simply become the observer? How can I feel justified or correct in laying aside everything, when I know that there are still missiles being dropped on innocent people? When there are women and children starving? When they are being abused? How can I do this when unfoldment in some arenas is delayed due to the mayhem or the chaos or the erratic actions, the warring actions, of others? Is that not irresponsible of me? Why would you even suggest standing back?"

In standing back, in holding the absolute vibration, frequency, and actuality, in your body, of love, of peace, you are acting as a beacon, as an anchor, as a transmitter, and you are holding the signal that nothing else is acceptable, viable, permissible upon the planet of Gaia.

We have said to thee, collectively and individually, you are billions. When there are billions holding the energy of the only acceptable reality being peace and love, then peace will reign. (1)

My purpose as archangel of peace is to anchor peace on Earth on behalf of the Mother/Father One. And until that has truly taken place, there are many other events, such as the return of particular masters, that do not and cannot take place, because the vibration is too low. So every opportunity in the physical realm, in the human realm, of bringing forth peace has need to be heartily and immediately, deeply, embraced.

There is no room for further conflict. Are these situations coming to the surface for the human collective to say, “This is too abhorrent. It cannot continue”? Yes. Have these souls died, as a soul group, to make this point? Yes.

Everybody is playing a role in this unfoldment. But the purpose, the higher purpose of the unfoldment is not to go and play political hockey, but to raise it to a joint decision on the part of all nations that this cannot continue. You are noticing that the Middle East is the cradle in this situation for the anchoring of new paradigms of peace. Are they also the places of greatest turmoil? Yes, and therefore the greatest opportunities for shift.

Are most of you traveling every night with me and with your star brothers and sisters to these places of conflict, of mayhem? Yes. Are your prayers, your meditations, your heart’s desire to create peace in these areas conjoining with the hearts of the populace that live there to create peace? Yes.

So despite these upheavals of violence, what is really happening is the people, each of you, in tandem with your brothers and sisters of these areas, is saying, “No, this simply cannot continue.” It is not a matter of which faction is right or wrong, because that is a completely gray area and it has no place, because to determine that someone is right or wrong means that they have greater favor with One, with God, with the Mother. And that is simply not so. It is an illusion of the most dim sort.

So that is what is truly transpiring. We are making many of what you think of as the political machinations, the posturing, the positioning, the jockeying, very slow right now in this situation, so that the true purpose of peace can come to the forefront and this violence simply stop. (2)

(Concluded tomorrow.)

Archangel Michael: When Peace will Reign - Part 2/2

Steve Beckow

In this concluding instalment, Archangel Michael makes some surprising suggestions on how to nurture peace. He tells us he has worked for eons to bring peace to this planet and, when it comes, would not have been able to without us.

Yes, we know that many of you have very strong ties to what you think is your nation-state. And you guard it because it has certain rights and privileges that are very positive, such as in Canada universal healthcare, and a place where not everybody in your neighborhood is armed with weapons. And these are values that are worth preserving.

But let us speak to the true issue at hand. There are para-military and military forces that guard these imaginary lines. And it has to do with money and finance, greed and power. And this is one of the areas that will need to simply go by the wayside...

So this is changing. And that is what this is about. So, now and then, I ask of you — yes, I request on behalf of the Mother and the Company of Heaven – I wish you to begin to erase borders. And you can see it as a child's exercise to take out of a map and with the child's pencil eraser begin to erase the borders, and particularly, Andrea [Scully], George, begin immediately to erase the borders that you are crossing. But do it all over Gaia. Begin to erase the borders. (1)

Yes, even amidst the chaos which is the breaking of the ice floes, there is time for joy. And it comes from within you and it comes from outside of you and it swirls all around you. Claim it and claim it for your own.

Bring it deep within that it may marry the joy within, explode and grow, and then share it with each and every being you meet and even those you don't. (2)

The growing of peace within the heart of the collective, which means nothing more than the heart of each person, is coming to fruition. And this is particularly true – even more true, more apparent, let us put it that way – in those areas that are war-torn.

Above, below, in between, on Gaia, within this galaxy, within this universe and throughout the multiverse, there is no one more weary and more yearning for peace than those who are directly involved in conflict.

There are actually only a minuscule – and I do mean minuscule – number of beings that actually thrive on the wages of war or personal conflict or combat. And those who do thrive are simply so out of touch with their inner being that they have forgotten that they truly yearn for peace or they have forgotten or do not trust or believe that peace is possible.

This growing sense that edges on frantic desperation is not a comfortable feeling for any being. But it is positive insofar as it is forcing many to simply seek peace within themselves, within their communities, within their families, within their nations because they feel they have no choice, that, if it continues at this rate and in this way, they will perish.

So peace and this yearning for peace has actually become a survival mechanism. From any perspective, this is good news.

And we mean it from the stage of global conflict to personal conflict to child or spousal abuse. So we mean it in the largest sense and in the most particular, individual sense. This is what I have worked for for eons so that is why I start this day with this personal piece of good news.

I could not do it without all of you, without all of you who hold the peace and my blue flame, in your hearts, in your lives, in your beingness, who accompany me to the darkest places so this is my thank you. And I will repeat it again and again and again. Thank you. (3)

Jesus: Fearlessly Embracing the Love Field

Here is a steady flow of truths from Jesus about peace and love. Not comfortable to hear because they rouse us to really stand out from the crowd and love where the rest remain uncommitted.

From 2014. Through John Smallman.

Peace is impossible you declare, because of all those unstable and violent ones who would maintain a constant state of war because it gives them power, control, and wealth. And so you conclude that armies and weapons are an essential form of defense against those misguided ones in order to maintain peace.

That is an insane belief, as you know in your hearts, but fear prevents you from acknowledging that one truth that would set you free.

As all the channels are repeatedly telling you "LOVE is the ONLY answer to all the problems that you experience." Yet, if you embrace Love, it seems to you that you are laying yourselves open to permanent abuse, pain, and suffering by making yourselves insanely vulnerable. But, on the other hand, you know deep within yourselves that Love is THE answer.

What the spiritual channels are doing, and what you Lightworkers, Starseeds, and Wayshowers are doing is fearlessly embracing the Love field that eternally supports you, and demonstrating by your faith, and by the results that occur in your immediate lives, that this is true.

AND where people are refusing the Love and refusing to trust, the conflicts, suffering, and betrayals continue – endlessly.

There are now more than enough of you on Earth actively demonstrating Love as a way of life – the only way of life, the Real way of life – to bring lasting peace to your confused and suffering multitudes.

Keep on Loving and watch your relationships – personal, societal, business, and international – stabilize, warm, develop, forgive, accept, and become as One. You know it makes sense, and that nothing else does...

Remember, you are eternally and infinitely supported by your loving Father, and therefore by all sentient life forms that our Father has created. The only opposition is from a few, a very few, a tiny minority of insane ego-driven souls in human form who can only achieve their aims if you support them.

Just stop supporting them.

Your only reason for doing so is because you are fearful, believing that you are small, insignificant beings in a vast and threatening Universe, and you fall for the egoic blusterings of these few insane and utterly misguided ones who would persuade you that Love is weak and that you need their strength – but they have no strength! And to fall for that line of reasoning is also insane.

You are all Divine Beings created from Love by God for eternal joy. That state is available to you right now! Wake up and embrace your Father, the Divine Field of Love, the Tsunami of Love that surrounds and supports you in every moment!

Release yourselves from fear by embracing Love, and watch with amazement as those few misguided ones who would control you fade away into the unreality of the dissolving illusion.

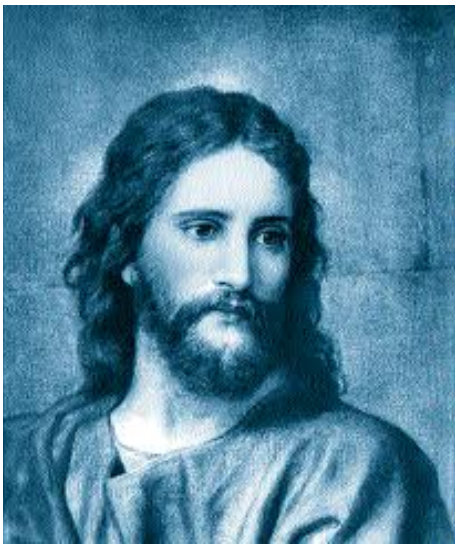
Jesus: Unnecessary Pain Shows the Futility of War



From 2014, Jesus tells us that we on Earth must realize the absolute futility of war before we'll renounce it; hence some conflicts drag on.

Here in the spiritual realms excitement, as you might put it, is approaching fever pitch! Yet all across the world, and particularly in the area of Palestine and Israel, it would seem that people are experiencing hell on Earth.

There is an enormous amount of unnecessary and totally unjustified pain and suffering as anger intensifies and conflicts rage, but be aware that this is the essential raising into humanity's conscious awareness of the futility of these ways of behaving, relating, and attempting to resolve differences between peoples.

For eons conflict has totally failed to resolve disagreements, let alone establish peaceful co-existence between warring factions. Finally humanity is getting the message, but it has taken this recent escalation of conflict across the globe to really bring this message home.

Consequently enormous numbers of good and loving people are working together to persuade those filled with hate and resentment to take a break from conflict and to meet with one another, initially to end the hostile activities that are tearing families and societies apart, and then to work together to establish a loving acceptance of each others' right to live in peace.

It does seem to you that people have been futilely attempting this for generations, which they have, but now there is such an intensity of Love bringing peoples together that the angry reactionary excitement of those you might describe as "hotheads" will be calmed down in order that their often intense rage ceases to fuel the fires of dissent that it seems can never be extinguished....

However, deep within every human being, hidden under a dark and divisive cloak of fear there burns an inextinguishable flame of Love. As a consequence of the escalating violence across the planet over the last few decades, and the realization that the threat of a worldwide nuclear holocaust has not yet been totally removed, many, in desperation or perhaps frustration, are lifting that dark cloak within themselves and finding their true nature beneath it waiting to embrace them.

And this is why, here in the spiritual realms, we are so excited, uplifted, and encouraged, because we can see the absolutely amazing and elevating effects that the Tsunami of Love is causing and promoting very rapidly across the planet and throughout humanity.

Realization of the absolute futility of conflict of any sort is dawning on humanity, and many are now getting together to gently and lovingly restrain those who, as yet, cannot see this and would continue engaging in senseless, wasteful, and in fact insane conflict.

So what we are seeing is that the futility of conflict has finally been truly recognized by the vast majority, consequently it will cease. From your perspective, reliant on the mainstream media for much of your inadequate information about the state of the world, the situation seems increasingly alarming. That is not a bad thing because it strongly encourages people to take notice and focus ever more intently on being loving in every moment. Mahandas Gandhi on Peace and Love

What is a consideration of peace and love without a look at the views of the leading advocate of non-violence, Mahandas Gandhi?

We offer you a selection of his teachings on the subject.

The day the power of love overrules the love of power, the world will know peace.

You must be the change you wish to see in the world.

My life is my message.

First they ignore you, then they ridicule you, then they fight you, and then you win.

I offer you peace. I offer you love. I offer you friendship. I see your beauty. I hear your need. I feel your feelings.

A small body of determined spirits fired by an unquenchable faith in their mission can alter the course of history.

An eye for an eye only ends up making the whole world blind.

I am prepared to die, but there is no cause for which I am prepared to kill.

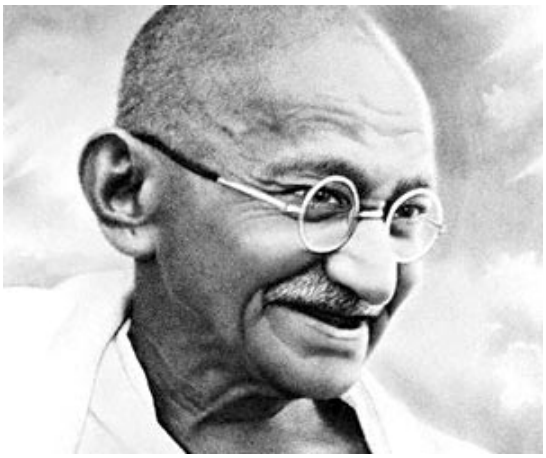
Each one has to find his peace from within. And peace to be real must be unaffected by outside circumstances.

I object to violence because when it appears to do good, the good is only temporary; the evil it does is permanent.

Love is the strongest force the world possesses and yet it is the humblest imaginable.

An unjust law is itself a species of violence. Arrest for its breach is more so.

Anger is the enemy of non-violence and pride is a monster that swallows it up.



Even if you are a minority of one, the truth is the truth.

I cannot teach you violence, as I do not myself believe in it. I can only teach you not to bow your heads before any one even at the cost of your life.

I have nothing new to teach the world. Truth and Non-violence are as old as the hills. All I have done is to try experiments in both on as vast a scale as I could.

If we are to teach real peace in this world, and if we are to carry on a real war against war, we shall have to begin with the children.

In a gentle way, you can shake the world.

Live as if you were to die tomorrow. Learn as if you were to live forever.

Increase of material comforts, it may be generally laid down, does not in any way whatsoever conduce to moral growth.

Intolerance betrays want of faith in one's cause.

Intolerance is itself a form of violence and an obstacle to the growth of a true democratic spirit.

- I shall not fear anyone on Earth.
- I shall fear only God.
- I shall not bear ill will toward anyone.
- I shall not submit to injustice from anyone.
- I shall conquer untruth by truth. And in resisting untruth, I shall put up with all suffering.

It is any day better to stand erect with a broken and bandaged head then to crawl on one's belly, in order to be able to save one's head.

It's the action, not the fruit of the action, that's important. You have to do the right thing. It may not be in your power, may not be in your time, that there'll be any fruit. But that doesn't mean you stop doing the right thing. You may never know what results come from your action. But if you do nothing, there will be no result.

Justice that love gives is a surrender; justice that law gives is a punishment.

I know, to banish anger altogether from one's breast is a difficult task. It cannot be achieved through pure personal effort. It can be done only by God's grace.=

My religion is based on truth and non-violence. Truth is my God. Non-violence is the means of realizing Him.

Non-cooperation with evil is as much a duty as is cooperation with good.

Non-violence and truth are inseparable and presuppose one another.

Non-violence is not a garment to be put on and off at will. Its seat is in the heart, and it must be an inseparable part of our being.

Nonviolence is the first article of my faith. It is also the last article of my creed.

Non-violence is the greatest force at the disposal of mankind. It is mightier than the mightiest weapon of destruction devised by the ingenuity of man.

Non-violence requires a double faith: Faith in God and also faith in man.

You must not lose faith in humanity. Humanity is an ocean; if a few drops of the ocean are dirty, the ocean does not become dirty.

("100 Mahatma Gandhi Peace Quotes," at http://members.tripod.com/lutheran_peace/gandhi-peace-quotes.html.)

When I despair, I remember that all through history the way of truth and love has always won. There have been tyrants and murderers and for a time they seem invincible but in the end, they always fall — think of it, always!

Nonviolence, which is a quality of the heart, cannot come by an appeal to the brain.

We must be the change we wish to see in the world.

We may never be strong enough to be entirely nonviolent in thought, word and deed. But we must keep nonviolence as our goal and make strong progress towards it. The Attainment of freedom, whether for a person, a nation or a world, must be in exact proportion to the attainment of nonviolence for each.

Anger is an acid that can do more harm to the vessel in which it stands than to anything on which it is poured.

Woman is more fitted than man to make exploration and take bolder action in nonviolence … There is no occasion for women to consider themselves subordinate or inferior to men … Woman is the companion of man, gifted with equal mental capacity … If by strength is meant moral power, then woman is immeasurably man's superior … If nonviolence is the law of our being, the future is with women.

The science of war leads one to dictatorship, pure and simple. The science of non- violence alone can lead one to pure democracy … The states that are today nominally democratic have either to become frankly totalitarian or, if they are to become truly democratic, they must become courageously non-violent.

Power is of two kinds. One is obtained by fear of punishment and the other by arts of love. Power based on love is thousand times more effective and permanent than power derived from fear of punishment …

Violence breeds violence … Pure goals can never justify impure or violent action … They say the means are after all just means. I would say means are after all everything. As the means, so the end … If we take care of the means we are bound to reach the end sooner or later.

Whenever you are in doubt or when the self becomes too much with you, try the following experiment: Recall the face of the poorest and most helpless person you have ever seen and ask yourself if the step you contemplate is going to be for any use to him or to her … Then you will find your doubts and your self melting away.

Truth and nonviolence demand that no human being may debar himself from serving any other human being, no matter how sinful he may be … Truth is the first to be sought for, and Beauty and Goodness will then be added unto you … An error does not become truth by reason of multiplied propagation, nor does truth become error because nobody sees it … Truth without humility would be an arrogant caricature … The quest of truth involves self-suffering, sometimes even unto death.

A non-violent army acts unlike armed men, as well in times of peace as in times of disturbances. Theirs will be the duty of bringing warring communities together, carrying peace propaganda, engaging in activities that would bring and keep them in touch with every single person in their parish or division. Such an army should be ready to cope with any emergency, and in order to still the frenzy of mobs should risk their lives in numbers sufficient for that purpose. … Satragraha (truth-force) brigades can be organized in every village and every block of buildings in the cities. In non-violent bodies the charger or soul force must mean everything and the physique must take second place. It is difficult to find such persons. That is why the non-violent force must be small if it is to be efficient.

[If the nonviolent society is attacked from without,] there are two ways open to non-violence. To yield possession, but non-cooperate with the aggressor … prefer death to submission. The second way would be non-violent resistance by the people who have been trained in the non-violent way … The unexpected spectacle of endless rows upon rows of men and women simply dying rather than surrendering to the will of an aggressor must ultimately melt him and his soldiery …

A nation or group which has made non-violence its final policy cannot be subjected to slavery even by the atom bomb … Before general disarmament commences some nation will have to disarm herself and take large risks. The level of non-violence in that nation, if that even happily comes to pass, will naturally have risen so high as to command universal respect."

Drought Around the World: What We Can Do

Kathleen Mary Willis

In Somalia close to 3 million people cannot meet their daily food needs.

Over 500,000 people have fled their homes this year alone in search of food, water, and safety.

Acute Watery Diarrhea and Cholera has spread to 11 of 18 regions of the country, with over 18,000 cases reported just this year.

Women are particularly impacted, sometimes forced to walk many kilometres to fetch water. In Somalia women will walk 25 to 50 kilometres on average to fetch water, exposing them to violence and sexual abuse.

Yemen is facing the largest food security crisis in the world with almost 7 million people requiring immediate life-saving assistance and at least 462,000 children suffering severe acute malnutrition.

Conflict has damaged and obstructed water networks and only 45 per cent of the country's health facilities are functioning.

And in north-east Nigeria, violence has left millions displaced and some 4.7 million people in severe food insecurity – at least 450,000 of them are children suffering from severe acute malnutrition.

http://www.unocha.org/top-stories/all-stories/famine-response-and-prevention-humanitarian-assistance-saving-lives-and-live

Young Halima has trekked for four days and nights in search of water. “We have named this drought Odi Kawayn, which is Somali for “something bigger than the elders,” she said. “None of our elders has ever seen a drought as severe as this one.”

Some 6.2 million people — half of Somalia’s population — need aid to survive, and 2.9 million of these people do not know where their next meal will come from.

Somalia has always been prone to drought, but some parts of the country have not received rain for three consecutive years.

Below is a post saying it rained (!) and how Kenyan farmers are working to protect wetlands.

BUSIA, Kenya, April 19 (Thomson Reuters Foundation) - Armed with a hoe and Wellington boots, George Wandera planted bamboo seedlings in neatly dug holes along the banks of a stream on his farm that feeds a nearby lake in western Kenya.

"I've never tried this on my farm before but it's the first step in protecting the stream," he said.

"Before the last downpour a few days ago, the water source had completely dried up."

Large swathes of Kenya - including parts of Busia county where Wandera lives - are experiencing severe water shortages, which have damaged crops and left 2.6 million people in need of aid.

The country's wetlands too have suffered in the drought, putting at risk communities who depend on them for fishing or irrigation, and who rely on them to act as a buffer from floods and drought.

How to Induce Society to Change and Become Peaceful?

Steve Beckow

How can people be persuaded to make a change in their behavior on a mass scale? How do we induce society to change?

The case in point for me is to change from tolerating all the wars and crime that go on in our world to wanting - no, lovingly demanding - a return to peace.

In that new world, I venture to guess that the only crime would be to break the peace.

I think society changes when it's inspired to do so.

Circumstances combine with the right personalities to produce inspiration at a time of necessity - and society moves.

Winston Churchill electrified the British nation with his bold reply to Hitler's peace speech in July 1940. Britain would never surrender. The British nation shifted from fearful uncertainty to bulldog determination.

At the opposite end of the spectrum, Mahandas Gandhi electrified the Indian empire, as it then was, with his peaceful protests and civil non-cooperation. Indians were led to abandon violent protest and take up peaceful protest. And they succeeded in securing their independence.

If the world is to shift from making war to demanding peace, I believe there'll need to be speakers of global stature to put the world's sentiments and longings into words. Leaders will have to make the case for the world's weariness of war and violence and killing.

SaLuSa once referred to the need for new leadership:

"Mankind is being confronted with conditions that are becoming intolerable, and they will continue until you are forced to deal with them. Peaceful solutions can be found, but it requires the will of those that lead you to seek more acceptable and lasting solutions.

"You can no longer continue in the old ways, and in some countries it will require a new Leadership to come forward to direct Mankind towards peaceful and acceptable answers. Part of this change of direction comes from you the people who wield much more power than you imagine. When the thought form for change grows it becomes a powerful tool that influences the Human population." (1)

Archangel Michael said to me in a personal reading that John Kennedy would reincarnate as a peace ambassador. And he identified Barack Obama as playing another key role. (2) I think of people of their stature as being what are needed to focus our concerns and speak for the world.

I consider that position vacant at the moment. Many people speak for a nation, but no one I'm aware of speaks for the world community, for humanity as a whole.

I wonder what Werner Erhard is up to these days. This would be a stellar assignment for him.

Or for someone new and completely unknown, from the younger generation perhaps...?

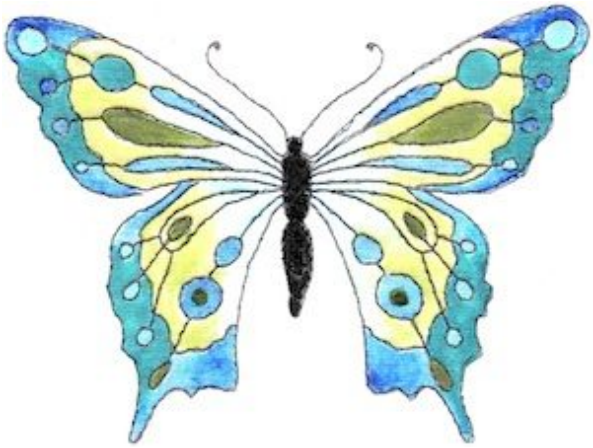
Letting Go of My Inner Conflict, Creating Peace Within

Kathleen Mary Willis



Sunday, April 22nd, was the first day of our week-long meditation for peace, Global Peace and Love Week, where we're standing or sitting as Archangel Michael is blowing his Blue Breath of Peace through us for 8 minutes at 9PM (your time), wherever we are on Gaia.

Not surprisingly, in a week dedicated to peace, during the afternoon on Sunday, a small conflict arose, between myself and a friend.

Knowing that a big part of our job as lightworkers is to be consciously aware of our false grids and core issues, our old entrenched beliefs and mental, emotional constructs, I wasn't too surprised this happened, especially because this week has an emphasis on peace.

From my inner work I've found that (A) our unconscious false grids tend to manifest physical suffering, pain, and ageing, and (B) our unconscious core issues, feelings not of love, tend to create mental, emotional suffering.

Sunday night, I had stood for 8 minutes at 9PM, while Archangel Michael's Blue Breath flowed through me.

I didn't sleep very well because I was worried about the conflict I had participated in that day, and that that person wanted to have a meeting, and discuss it the following morning.

My work with false grids and core issues has shown me that worry is a false grid of broken trust.

What I didn't expect was how much more I would discover about myself at the meeting.

Between the two of us, I uncovered grids and issues that I hadn't seen before -- deeper understanding of old beliefs and feelings -- and how clearly they have created my reality.

I really get now how when all conflict can be viewed with awareness, and the ability to listen to the self and each other, it is truly a gift, a way for us to let go of our old beliefs and to understand our sorrows and fears.

The hardest thing to do is to look at the self without judgement or fear, to view everything that is not of love, with Love, to Love oneself during discovery.

When we can feel and forgive with Love the old emotions, beliefs, situations -- knowing that they are not real -- and name the grids and issues, so we have conscious awareness of them, they lose their power to create our reality.

Our unconscious grids and issues create chaos, addiction to pain, all dis-ease, when we are not cognizant of them.

I understand that there is always more to let go -- we need to make sure we give ourselves the time needed to to do this -- then with intent we can create our self-worth and self-Love, Nova Being.

Archangel Michael's Breath is helping us with our awareness of false grids and core issues, bringing to the surface our inner conflict.

I feel much lighter since the heart-to-heart conversation with my friend, more joyful, with greater understanding of why I do things.

When we face into our fear, in truth is joy for sacred purpose.

I am in gratitude for the discussion and to the unseen beings around us for the conscious awareness that came, the greater understanding of Who I Am.

Thank you, Archangel Michael, for this week of your Breath of Peace -- for our individual creation of peace within -- greater understanding and knowing of Who We Are, what creates peace collectively.

"When there are billions holding the energy of the only acceptable reality being peace and love, then peace will reign."

Just Keep It Coming

Steve Beckow

As we spend a week in peace meditations and love transmissions, let me share my vision for a world that works.

The vision I have is that a world that loves is a world that works.

Moreover, a world that loves is a world at peace. The divine quality of love and the divine state of peace go together.

What we as lightworkers need to do, in my humble opinion, is to lead the way, confidently, in the direction of that kind of a world. Hopefully the rest of humanity will follow.

We're a hundred monkeys and we're making a significant change in our world.

And we may need to lead, even though not all lightworkers will have experienced the kind of love that's really being talked about here, but left undefined and unspecified.

Recently the Divine Mother called it "sacred love."

> Divine Mother: Why (laughing) can we not call it ‘Mother Love’?
>
> Let us call it Sacred Love. …
> Your sense of limitation, and each of you in your unique divinity, in your expression of us, have your own parameters based on many lifetimes and this lifetime, of what you think of or feel as love, and it has been restricted and hemmed in.

> Now, you have yearned to know love and this yearning has expressed in many simply as yearning, but many of you – most of you and this is part of your ascension – are breaking through that barrier as well, and coming to what you, dear Steve, have called 'Bliss' – what many call awakening, expansion – it matters not. But into that knowing and that experience of such unlimited, unconditional, unrestricted bliss, exuberance, joy – all of this is love. (1)

Bliss, joy, all of it are just forms of love.

Everything I'm saying here is based on you understanding that, when I say a world that loves, I mean a world that knows and experiences what the Mother meant by "sacred love."

How to picture it? Imagine the room suddenly and instantly filled with something that swallows you whole in a flash and leaves you on fire with love for the world.

That's what the experience of sacred love - what I used to call "transformative love" - is like. I can't call it explosive because the whole transformation occurs in an instant whereas an explosion happens over time.

One second I'd sense love over here or bliss over there and the next second I became them. Or perhaps it's more accurate to say they filled me up, swallowed me up.

I set out to become what Ramakrishna called bait for some great Fish and a great Fish swallowed me whole. Us two becoming one caused a transformation in me.

Moreover, this very strong love would keep any untoward feelings at bay. Rather than being overpowered by negative emotions, transformative love would transform them.

For both these reasons, I called it "transformative" love. But sacred love is a much better term.

I'm not in sacred love any more, but I can't forget its impact.

Sacred love is experienced as arising in a person. Where does it arise from? What's its source? Its source is the heart.

Columbus discovered America. Einstein discovered relativity. And I (thanks to the celestials) discovered my own heart.

Remember Krishna saying: Fools pass blindly by the place of my dwelling, there in the heart? (2)

We walk by the house of God continuously. The heart is the real ark of the covenant, which houses the soul, "the light always burning on the altar." The heart is the source of a torrent of love, an endless artesian well.

"The treasure buried in a field" has many spiritual meanings. It's a metaphor that suggests relationships.

In the version of it I'm using, the heart, with its endless flow of love, is the treasure box and the endless flow of love is itself the treasure, buried in the field of the body. (3)

Most of us look outside for love - and we then complain that we're not getting enough from our partner or we worry that we've lost our partner's love. On and on we go seeking love outside, keeping our own personal ledger of losses and gains. Our partner becomes our security plan for a life filled with love. Lose them and we lose love.

We spend our time asking: "He (she) loves me. He loves me not." All of this goes on while an endless fountain of love exists in our very own hearts - the last place we look for it.

Eckhart Tolle tells a story about a man sitting on a box at a crossroads, begging. When asked what was in the box, the man looked and discovered that it was filled with gold. (4) The box is the heart. The gold is love, bliss, joy, peace - the qualities of the Divine.

Buried deep within us is the answer to all our problems.

I went through most of my life never knowing what love was, no matter how many people did or didn't love me. After I experienced sacred love from March 13, 2015 until it was subsumed in bliss on Sept. 27, 2015, I was completely blown over. I had no idea what it was, how all-consuming it was. I had no idea about anything. I laughed and cried in turns.

Then love and bliss receded again and I'm now back in everyday consciousness. Another state I can visit but cannot reside in.

But there's no cause for worry. The experience of ascension - and with it, sacred love - is guaranteed to all lightworkers and everyone else who can adjust to and stand the more refined vibrations of Fifth-Dimensional consciousness.

After ascending, we'll live in an environment permanently soaked in sacred love. Saul and Jesus through John Smallman have been describing it for years. Mike Quinsey referred to it the other day:

> "If souls just knew or comprehended how great their potential was, they would apply themselves to finding out the way to evolve which is simply expressed as Universal Love [sacred love, transformative love]. It sounds hard when you have not reached that level...."
> "Heaven is a place of Harmony and Love where all is in a state of complete Love. It may be out of your reach at present but is the end of a journey you have just commenced. Some souls have touched such energies and tell of the ecstasy they have experienced. Joy and Happiness come through holding the energy of Love and as you give it out you are helping all others by lifting them up." (5)

I could not have said it better. I totally agree with Mike.

What ascension is all about, in my view, is an enhanced experience of love and an expanded existence within its enfolding arms. And the folks behind ascension mean it to be inclusive, not exclusive. All are welcome.

Sometimes I want to shriek out: "That endless supply of love you're looking for? It's in your heart."

But none of that would have very much effect, I fear.

So I channel all that energy into building a new world, knowing full well that with just the passage of time everyone will come to know this best of all possible worlds - who knows in what dimension it resides? Who cares? Just keep the love coming.

Run into the lake. Fall into the lake. Get pushed into the lake. Immerse yourself in the lake of sacred love. Allow it to fill you completely and flow through you like a torrent.

Who am the Lord, their soul." (Ibid., 81.)

(3) There are many roads to God. The experience of love in the heart is one of them. Another would be the sight of a Light brighter than a thousand suns. In that version of enlightenment, the soul/Christ/Atman is seen, rather than love or bliss being experienced. Others may see a form of God or clouds of consciousness.

(4) A beggar had been sitting by the side of a road for over thirty years. One day a stranger walked by. "Spare some change?" mumbled the beggar, mechanically holding out his old baseball cap.

"I have nothing to give you," said the stranger. Then he asked: "What's that you are sitting on?"

"Nothing," replied the beggar. "Just an old box. I have been sitting on it for as long as I can remember."

“Ever looked inside?” asked the stranger.

“No,” said the beggar. “What’s the point? There’s nothing in there.”

“Have a look inside,” insisted the stranger.

The beggar managed to pry open the lid. With astonishment, disbelief, and elation, he saw that the box was filled with gold. (Eckhart Tolle, The Power of Now. Downloaded from http://www.inner-growth.info/power_of_now_tolle/eckhart_tolle_chapter1.htm)

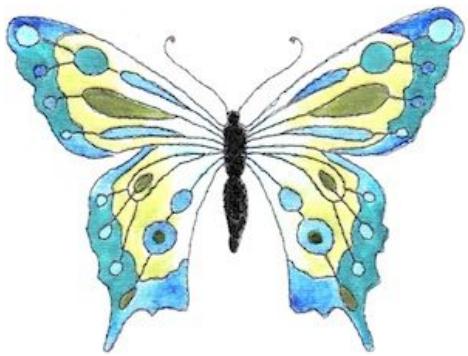
False Grids and Core Issues: How To Know Them

Kathleen Mary Willis



False grids are entrenched beliefs. Core issues are mental/emotional constructs.

Our unconscious false grids create suffering, pain, ageing.

Our unconscious core issues create mental/emotional suffering, within and without.

Over the last couple of years I have been guided to understand and know my false grids and core issues using the Tarot.

Angeles Arrien, who wrote The Tarot Handbook, says:

> "The Tarot is a symbolic map of consciousness and an ancient book of wisdom that reveals to us visually and symbolically the creative ideas and states of consciousness that appear in multiple existences in all cultures.
> "The seventy-eight symbols are portraitures and archetypes of inner and outer experiences that are prevalent within human experience."

Angeles Arrien's handbook and the Thoth Tarot Deck, designed by Aleister Crowley and painted by Lady Frieda Harris, are the book and the deck of cards I was guided to use for conscious awareness of my false grids and core issues.

Lady Frieda Harris, the illustrator of the Thoth Tarot Deck, said:

> "The Tarot could be described as God's Picture Book, or it could be likened to a celestial game of chess, the Trumps being the piece to be moved according to the law of their own order over a checkered board of the four elements."

To become consciously compassionately aware of my grids and issues, I developed a consistent schedule of pulling cards daily, questioning and listening to my Divine Guidance, and taking notes.

This is the simple daily routine I was guided to do:

- Each morning I entered into my created sacred space.
- I shuffled my Tarot deck, and pulled five cards placing them face down in a straight line, five across.
- When I turned them over, the five cards, read from left to right, were an illustration of what I had experienced the day before
- I would look up the five cards in The Tarot Handbook to learn what each card represented and take notes, and then ask questions of my guidance for greater understanding and knowing.

Talking to our guidance becomes second nature when working with the Tarot.

I learned to ask a lot of questions (out loud) and to 'know' from listening.

I found:

It is much easier to let go of old ways of being with conscious awareness.

Conscious awareness of our grids and issues helps us remember our wholeness, and creates joy, gratitude!

I discovered there are seven false grids and six core issues within the Tarot.

False grids, entrenched beliefs, in the Tarot:

oppression

self-cruelty

strife (anxiety)

interference (doubt)

disappointment

Core issues, mental emotional constructs, in the Tarot:

sorrow

fear of ruin

fear of failure

fear of defeat

Pulling a five-card layout daily, patterns of behaviour, begin to emerge.

Taking time to listen is key. Our guidance has much to tell us to help us unlock our patterns of behaviour.

Taking notes helps immensely to see the repeating patterns of past situations and behaviour for us to be consciously aware of.

For conscious awareness of false grids, entrenched beliefs, call on, invoke Archangel Michael and Archangel Gabrielle:

I invoke Archangel Michael and Archangel Gabrielle for conscious awareness of my false grids.

When false grids are discovered:

Feel them to heal them.

Allow tears to fall,

feel the emotions.

Then sit still quietly while the false grids, entrenched beliefs, are lifted by Archangel Michael.

Allow false grids to be lifted by Archangel Michael feel the joy from the conscious awareness.

Thank Archangel Michael with joy and Archangel Gabrielle

with joy, gratitude!

Repeat daily.

For core issues, invoke Archangel Raphael and St. Germaine, for conscious awareness and transmutation of them:

I invoke Archangel Raphael and St. Germaine for conscious awareness and transmutation of my core issues.

When core issues become apparent allow the feelings to arise.

Feel them to heal them.

Let the tears fall,

feel the emotions.

Core issues are not eliminated but they can be changed, transmuted, to peace and Love.

Our conscious awareness is the transmutation.

Allow Divine Alignment, peace and Love.

***

We are learning to let go of lifetimes, full of difficult experiences, without judgement.

My principal guide told me through Linda Dillon:

There is no such thing as mistakes.

The only mistake humans make is in judgement, when they judge themselves or others to be less than,

when they do not see the glory of their own Divinity, and that is just sad.

From the understandings acquired from pulling Tarot cards we can begin to see what we have been creating and why repeated patterns have occurred.

Conscious awareness of false grids and core issues is an opportunity to be compassion for self, for all of us.

When we ask for conscious awareness of our false grids and core issues

we are facing our sorrow

and our fears.

With Divine help, our false grids are lifted, and our core issues transmute so we stop creating dis-ease, within and without.

Conscious awareness of our false grids and core issues creates our freedom, and freedom for many, with knowing of the Interconnectedness of All.

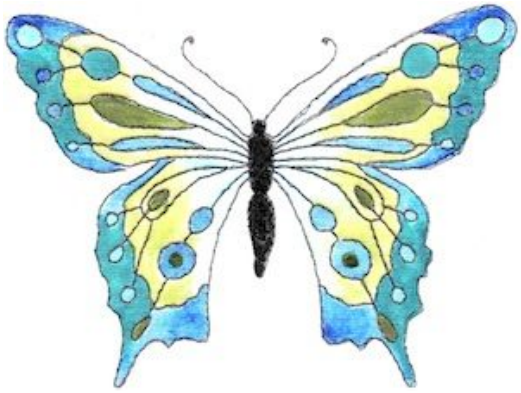
When there are billions holding the energy

of the only acceptable reality being peace and love,

then peace will reign.

Archangel Michael

There's A New Wind Blowing: Archangel Michael's Breath of Peace



Thank you, Archangel Michael, for your Breath of Peace, the winds of change on Gaia.

Archangel Michael's Blue Breath of Peace is helping us to see, to feel, to understand and to know what is creating conflict within us, and therefore without.

In order to create peace we have need to know what entrenched beliefs we have running.

Often the wording of them -- what we say to ourselves or feel on a daily basis -- is quite unconscious.

They can be passed down as family patterns or picked up from others and recreated within ourselves.

These false grids or entrenched beliefs limit our freedom to be who we truly are.

Archangel Michael, in December 2013, had this to say about the false grids:

> "Welcome to you. Welcome to all of you. Welcome, beloved ones, my warriors of peace, legion of love. We all bow to the Mother and then we stand upright, in the fullness of our being, you and yours, us and ours, brothers and sisters together, to claim our freedom, to claim our birthright, and for each of you to go forth as the Creators of Nova Earth.
> "You have been locked in a room and that room is false grids. It is the old illusion of the old 3rd which never had, from our perspective, true substance. It has all been smoke and mirrors and in many ways it has been like going to a carnival or a house of horrors.
>
> "And there has been distortion. And while you are in the middle of that, enjoying being scared, you have forgotten, my beloved ones, that it is not real and that the carnival will shut down and leave town tomorrow. Well, let us make it today!" (1)

The false grids no longer serve us and now is the time for their destruction, removal and elimination.

As we do this work, we also do it for the collective through our energetic fields that surround each of us, with our understanding and knowing the interconnectedness of All.

Archangel Michael continues:

> "You are seeing this shift in the microcosm and in the macro. And you are seeing all over your planet the warriors of light who step forward and demand their freedom. They may think that they are asking for financial freedom, political freedom, social justice, but what they are really asking for is to be free to be themselves, the totality of who they are. And for the systems that have been adjuncts to these false grids to get out of the way! And we declare it so.
>
> "This is core work and it is not sequential work. Yes, at one time it has been. And it is sequential insofar as you do it, the more that you rid yourself and the collective of the false grids, the freer you are to pursue the truth and the totality of who you are. But you do not stop or put experiencing who you are on hold while you clear. They are done in conjunction. It is the never-ending flow. And the beauty, the experience of the love, the peace, the joy, is what pushes you on, catapults you on, to remove even more."

Archangel Michael's Blue Breath of Peace is helping us get the really deeply-entrenched beliefs.

One of them is the belief that God is punishing.

This can show up in many ways such as oppression (control), self-cruelty (all judgement), anxiety (separation), worry (broken trust), interference (doubt), futility and disappointment.

All the false grids stem from our lack of self-worth and lack of self-love.

Archangel Michael and Archangel Gabrielle are on high alert this week, at our beck and call -- they always are -- in joy that we are calling on them for help.

As we stand in Archangel Michael's Breath of Peace every evening, there is great opportunity for us to use his Breath for conscious awareness of our entrenched old beliefs, the false grids.

Taking the time to understand and know the false grids -- (I give a method using the Tarot here) -- creates our freedom, Nova Being and Nova Earth.

Eckhart Tolle: Personal and Transcendental Love

What Eckhart calls "transcendental love" is what the Mother called "sacred love" and I called "transformative love." While both were experiences of sacred love, his was undoubtedly a much deeper experience than mine.

A Message from Eckhart Tolle

Tuesday, 12 April, 2011 http://lightworkers.org/channeling/129777/eckhart-personal-love

Question: If we're all one, why do we feel drawn toward certain individuals in an expression of "personal love"?

Eckhart Tolle: True love is transcendental. Without recognition of the formless within yourself, there can be no true transcendental love. If you cannot recognize the formless in yourself, you cannot recognize yourself in the other. The recognition of the other as yourself in essence – not the form – is true love.

As long as the conditioned mind operates and you are completely identified with it, there's no true love. There may be substitutes, things that are called "love" but are not true love. For example, "falling in love"…perhaps most of us have experienced it. Maybe one or two at this moment are "in love", and those who have experienced it have also experienced "falling out of love".

We need to remember to understand [the difference between] true love and other forms of so-called love. We are in the relative as form, and in the absolute as formless consciousness. The two dimensions that the human being embodies are the 'human' and the 'being'. The human is the form, the being is the formless, the timeless consciousness itself. It sometimes happens that the form has an affinity with other forms. It could happen for a number of reasons. One being that this form has come out of another form – called your mother – and so there is an affinity of this form with that other form. You have a love toward your mother that might be called 'personal'.

Another aspect of affinity with another form is male/female. You can be drawn to another body in a sexual way, and it's sometimes called "love". Especially if the sexual act is denied long enough, it's more likely to develop into obsessive love…so much so, that in cultures where you could not have sex until you were married, falling in love could be a huge thing and could lead to suicide. Naturally, there is an affinity of the male/female, the incompleteness of this form. The primary incompleteness of this form is that you are either a man or a woman. The oneness has become the duality of male/female.

The pull towards the other is an attempt to find wholeness, completeness, fulfillment through the opposite polarity, in an attempt to find the Oneness. That lies at the basis of the attraction. It's to do with form, because on the level of form you are not whole – you are one half of the whole. One half of humanity is male, one half is female, roughly.

You have the attraction for the other, then there may be finding certain qualities in another human being that resonate with certain qualities in yourself. Or, if they don't resonate, it may be the opposite that you feel drawn to. If you are a very peaceful person, maybe you feel drawn toward a dramatic person, or vice-versa. And again, you are hoping for some completion there. You can have an affinity with another form, which can be called 'personal love'. If personal love is all that there is, then what is missing is the transcendental dimension of the formless – which is where true love arises. Is that part of the personal love, or is the personal level all that there is? That determines whether that so-called "love" is going to turn into something painful eventually, and frustrating, or if there is a deepening.

There may be an attraction that is initially sexual between two humans. If they start living together, this cannot endure for that long and be the fulfillment of the relationship. At some point, sexual/emotional [attraction] needs to deepen and the transcendental dimension needs to come in, to some extent, for it to deepen. Then true love shines through the personal. The important thing is that true love emanates from the timeless, non-formal dimension of who you are. Is that shining through the personal love that is to do with affinity of forms? If it is not, there is complete identification with form, and complete identification with form is ego.

Many times you may think "that's it!" and after living together for a little while you realize "that was a mistake", or "I was completely deluded". Even in parent-children relationships, which is a very close bond on the level of form, if the transcendental dimension does not shine through, eventually the love between children and parents turns into something else. This is why so many people have very problematic relationships with their parents.

Some relationships may start as purely form-based, and then the other dimension comes in after a while. Perhaps only after a lot of problems, and perhaps you get close to a breakup, when suddenly there is a deepening and then you are able to bring in space.

The key is to ask, "Is there space in this relationship?" Or are there only thoughts and emotions? It's dreadful prison to inhabit if you live with a person and all you have are thoughts and emotions. Occasionally you are okay, but there is disagreement, friction.

We need to acknowledge that there are personal affinities. But in themselves, they are never ultimately fulfilling. More often than not, they are a source of suffering. Love becomes a source of suffering when the transcendental is missing. How does the transcendent come in? By being spacious with the other. Which essentially means that you access the Stillness in yourself while you look at the other.

Not mental noise, not emotional waves. That does not mean that there cannot be emotions or thoughts, but there is something else present in the relationship. That applies not only to close personal relationships, but also to more superficial relationships at work.

With any human relationship, the question is, "Is there space?" It's a pointer. Space is when thought becomes unimportant – even an emotion becomes unimportant.

When people live together, sometimes the other is no longer acknowledged in daily life because there is so much to do. If you wake up in the morning, is there a moment when you acknowledge the presence of the other?

It's the most wonderful thing if you can be there for the other as space, rather than as a person. At this very moment, you can either be here as a person, or you can be here as the space.

Saul: How Do We “Be Love”?

Steve Beckow

A little while back, I asked John Smallman to ask Saul how we "be love."

It's interesting to note that Sanat Kumara and I had a similar discussion on the Hour with an Angel program for April 27, 2017.

Saul has responded with a generous discussion of the matter, which I append here, with thanks to John.

Saul: Good morning, Steve. Thank you for your message of inquiry which I will now answer fully for you. However, remember, a person is not always ready to hear the answer to the question that he asks at the time that he asks it, as you are undoubtedly well aware.

So, be patient with yourself, and accept yourself lovingly just as you see yourself in this moment. Release all negative self-judgments, they are just egoic distractions offering insoluble problems for you to attempt to resolve.

The human collective is presently dealing with the enormous task of releasing eons worth of “core issues” individually. Issues of hatred, bitterness, resentment, jealousy, judgment, and blame to which it has individually been clinging as it has DEMANDED divine restitution and damages for its personal suffering. Engaging with others in their suffering is not helpful. Intending to send Love to them is enormously helpful and effective.

And these issues, as they arise all across the world, are leading to conflicts at all levels of human society – personal one on one, family, religious and political institutions, various ethnic groups, divisions between people of the same nationality, and nation to nation – but all suffering is a direct result of following the “guidance” of the ego. Egos club together to address issues and end up in conflict with each other. Egos delight in conflict. Everyone has enjoyed seeing the pain or suffering of one that they have – even quietly, secretly and with hidden or unacknowledged personal shame – judged as deserving of punishment, and felt satisfaction that their judgment has therefore been proved right!

The problems of humanity are insoluble. In fact they are non existent! There are only individual problems. Individual problems can and will be resolved when the individual chooses to ignore and not respond to egoic guidance, and instead opens to Love. This generally does not happen all at once. The intention is set and then repeated at least daily, and as the intention becomes firmly established it starts to be acted on.

This is done by accepting that every human, however far anyone one sees or knows seems to have strayed from it in one's own personal view, is on a spiritual path, and is truly doing their best. Everyone believes that he or she is doing his or her best, even if they are not doing very well. Everyone is to some extent in denial, it's part of the separation experience, and it is a person's core issues that are denied because they are both extremely painful and shame-filled.

The separation experience is shame-filled because it is a locking out or refusal to acknowledge God's infinite Love for every one of His beloved children. It is a rejection of God, but is seen as a rejection by Him. For a better understanding you can compare it to the anger, resentment, and rejection that young adolescents project onto their parents as they grow up and learn to become independent of them. And of course vast numbers of children, have over the eons, been severely abused.

The parents very frequently react angrily and judgmentally to these behaviors because they have always felt a sense of inadequacy in their child-rearing abilities, and it seems to them that their children are now calling them on this, which they likely are, and do not realize that it is a necessary part of the children's growth into adult maturity. Then later, when the children do mature and when the parents have had time to think about their parenting behaviors and recognize that the children, in spite of everything, have indeed become mature adults with their own valid way of living their human lives, acceptance between the generations occurs, reinforcing the love that has always been there.

The only way out of this self-reinforcing and extremely painful recurring and seemingly infinite loop of conflict and disagreement, which is like following a path along a möbius strip, is to break it by releasing all judgment of self and others – judgment of others is mostly projection of one's own unacknowledged or denied shameful thoughts, words, or actions – and forgiving and accepting oneself and others unconditionally, then Love flows in. You do not have to do anything, you just need to allow whatever is arising to be what it is. Instead of judging self or others, see through the egoic mask presented, and intend to see and respond to the Christed Self, the Real Self, that resides permanently within each one of you.

Most people live with a sense of personal inadequacy because, as well as judging themselves inadequate, they compare themselves to others who have good egoic fronts or masks that they present to the world. But you are you and you have no choice but to live with that, and to do that adequately you must accept yourself just as you are. Who you are as a human, with all the flaws or inadequacies that you judge yourself to have, is a choice you made in order to be presented with lessons that you wished to learn.

And of course others with whom you are closely involved are assisting you in this, and you are, in turn, assisting them. Humans are on a cooperative path to awakening. If you choose to work alone, without cooperating – whatever the reason you may use to justify doing this – you are choosing not to awaken at this moment and shutting out or hiding from the Love that is waiting with infinite patience to flow into you when you will allow It.

Judging yourself as in any way unworthy of Love is a choice you make to hide from It, and that then seems to confirm for you the rightness of your sense of unworthiness, and so you do not feel Love's Presence, although It is always with you. You have to let go of all negative self-judgment and allow, or, if you prefer, surrender to the Love that is always there for you.

Because you have judged yourself so negatively for so long it has become very ingrained within you – especially if you have said or done things to prove the rightness of that judgment – and so it is difficult at first to surrender into the Love instead of hiding from it in shame at your firm belief in your unchanging unworthiness. It seems that nothing you do changes the situation. And that, of course, is true. You cannot change the situation because there is no situation to change, there is only Love, and it is You.

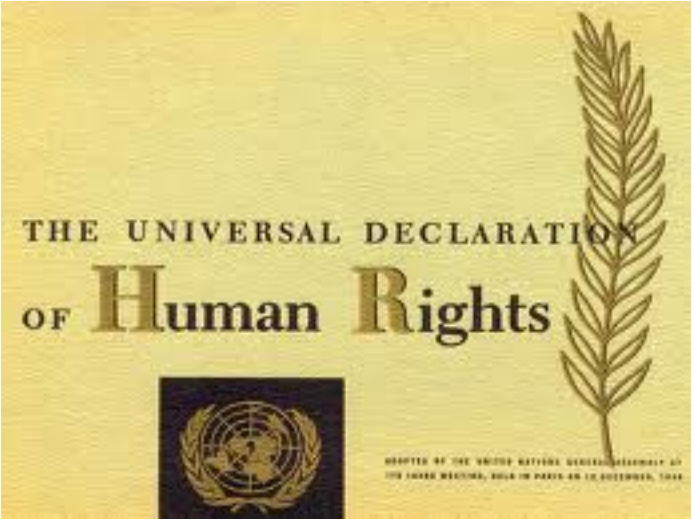
What you can change are your beliefs, and the behaviors and attitudes that flow from them. Your beliefs are of the ego. Love has no beliefs, It knows, and what It knows is Itself, which is Reality.

So to conclude, dear Steve, intend in every moment to accept yourself just as you are, without trying to reason out how to do that, and ask yourself: "if God Loves me unconditionally, as He surely does, is it not rather sulky of me not to do the same?" :) You are fine, you are Love ACCEPT that truth, and offer It to everyone, especially yourself, then choose and intend to feel It. It is delicate, gentle, peaceful, undemanding, soft, and welcoming. Return Its welcome.

Sending you an abundance of Love, Saul.

Peace, Human Rights, and Universal Law

Steve Beckow



I'd like to give my personal view of some relationships among peace, human rights, and universal law.

I base my opinion on human rights on the experience of being a human-rights decision maker - a refugee adjudicator for the Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada - for eight years.

I base my opinion on peace on the experiences of peace that I've had; on universal law, on the teachings of the Company of Heaven. (1)

Peace is a soul condition, a transcendent state, a condition that arises from a dimension beyond bodies and forms.

It sees the mind become utterly still. Nothing stirs - not a thought or desire. There are no waves (vrittis) in the mind. No candle flickers in this windless place of peace.

Surprisingly, when I was in that state on two occasions, I felt as solid as granite. You'd think I'd feel buoyant. But I didn't. I felt substantial, absolutely solid.

I've never felt so much at home as I did in that state. There was just me, with nothing added and nothing taken away.

***

That's peace for me. It wasn't transcendental. It was transformative. Transcendental comes later.

Transformative on the one hand means the realization in question propelled me from a state of unconscious awareness to one of conscious awareness. But it didn't alter my dimensionality.

Transcendental on the other hand - as the term is used in terrestrial enlightenment literature - refers to a more evolved level of realization than the transformative.

Our first taste of it comes with seventh-chakra enlightenment (Brahmajnana, God-Realization). Even that's not enough to propel us to the culminating event of Ascension (Sahaja Samadhi). Thus even that is not enough to propel us from the 3rd/4th Dimension to the 5th.

Any taste of the transcendental far exceeds the bliss of the transformative.

My experiences of peace, I believe, were realized knowledge at the level of transformation, but not at the level of transcendence.

Peace then is the goal we're aiming for and this, for me, is what peace consists of. We go deeper and deeper into peace as our higher dimensionality unfolds.

Turning to human rights, they're the mechanisms we use to attain a peaceful balance in society among citizens making demands of each other. Human rights are the mechanisms used to equitably keep the peace in society. They're founded in fairness and equal-mindedness, which are themselves qualities associated with the center, the middle, the heart.

They're the mechanism we use to ensure that no one is bullied into submission, threatened with violence, or in other ways persecuted in our world. They ensure the freedom of some by denying freedom to others. They deny freedom to those who would harm in the name of those whom they would harm.

But human rights are at best a pale reflection of universal law. Universal law doesn't supplant the need for human rights, but it deepens the relevance and impact of them.

Universal law enhances the clarity and focus of human rights. Universal law describes how the universe actually works.

The law of freewill can offer an example. It holds that everyone's right to freedom of choice shall be honored unless one has freely entered into some arrangement limiting those rights (like service in the army) or they're out to harm others.

If we violate the freewill of others, a second universal law - the law of cause and effect - is triggered. It ensures that the harm we visit on them will be visited on us - so that we learn the consequences of our actions.

What went around comes around only in a future lifetime, usually, but it does see that we experience what we've had others experience at our hands.

Human rights are enforceable by the agencies of state protection. Universal laws are self-enforcing. They need no agencies, no arms of the law, no courts of justice.

Often justice does not prevail or not fully prevail in human courts. But justice always prevails to the letter in the workings of the universal law.

When human-rights bodies and agencies base their human-rights legislation on universal law the same way they base them now on a treaty or charter, then, I think, we'll be building human rights on a foundation of rock instead of the sand we build on at present.

At present the human-rights domain is subject to the political. Human-rights decision makers can be biased by political pressure, with threat of job loss for non-conformity. Human-rights programs can be starved of funds by governments who don't support them.

We've seen a tremendous retreat in the whole domain of human rights at least since 9/11. All of it was in my opinion intentional - an intentional retreat from an order that respected human rights to one that routinely violated and tried to shrink them.

There's no retreat in the honoring of universal law. One cannot even contemplate universal law, I think, as long as one remains loyal to hatred, violence, and warfare.

Nonetheless, there are those among us who can do this work - who can rewrite the human-rights cornerstone declarations again, for a New Age, based on the relevant universal laws, most prominent among them the law of freewill.

This is something, as Kathleen has pointed out, that does not need to wait for the Reval.

Archangel Michael: The Declaration of World Peace

Steve Beckow

I asked Archangel Michael through Linda Dillon in early October 2012 if he would channel a declaration of world peace through me. This is the document that resulted.

With the benefit of distance from the event, I now see this as a document that is heavily tinged with my own writing style. And so I ask you perhaps to consider it on its own merits, undoubtedly overlit by Michael but heavily influenced by me.

Peace is the cry of the soul, the song of the spirit. Peace is the natural condition of the world, the place to which all things return. Everything yearns for peace and everything rests in peace. Peace is the place to which this world journeys. Nothing can stop it from reaching and realizing peace.

There comes a time in the affairs of worlds when the forces of disintegration can no longer resist the forces of attraction, when hatred and division can no longer overpower love and peace. There comes a rebound in the councils of worlds, a pushing back from the people which none can stand against or fail to honor.

At this time, the people of Earth will see an outbreak of peace, overpowering all that divided, wounded, and killed. It has been decreed by the Highest that the Earth, after eons of wandering in the ways of havoc and war, shall once again return to the ways of peace. Against the wave of Love that is sweeping the Earth, political and military leaders will prove powerless.

The people have gathered in Consciousness and have spoken words in Silence which none can ignore. They say that war will no longer be tolerated on Earth and the heavens have responded. Soon weapons will no longer work on Earth and the time when swords will be rendered into ploughshares will be here.

How to prepare for peace? Peace is a condition at the essence of our being which works its way outward and surfaces in universal love and harmony. All we must do is remove the obstacles to its rise and flowering. Peace is a choice and a surrendering. Peace is a determination and a remembering.

Peace is more than a refusal to bear arms against each other. It's a resolve to allow each his or her fair share, his or her turn, his or her chosen path and goals. Peace is one of the divine qualities and grows in the same garden as they do: joy, compassion, love, harmony, unity all come along with peace like roots of the same creeper.

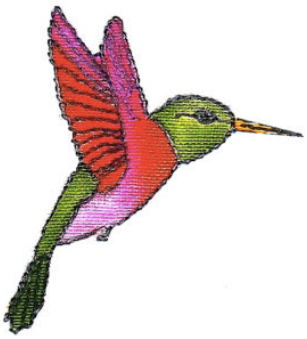
Now is the time declared from old when peace will again reign on Earth and humankind will return to its original bond of loving kindness with all that swims, walks and flies. The children of Earth shall make war no more. The children of Earth will come together in loving council and restore the Garden of Eden that this planet was, is and shall be.

Never more on Earth shall the guns of war sound. Never more shall people scream and die in agony. A new age is upon us that shall see harmony and beneficence restored, never to be lost again. The grand experiment is over and much knowledge has been gained. But the time has come for this blue planet to return to heaven and for heaven to return to Earth.

Every knee shall bend in love to the One. No one shall again be master over another save the One. The endless journey upon which all are embarked to return to the One will again proceed by a straight and open road. All that was crooked will be made straight. Now is the time for the curtain to fall on a world at war and for the curtain to rise on a world at peace.

Restoring the Peace

Steve Beckow



We only know what we know. I know nothing about how to bring peace to a troubled world.

I have one or two ideas about bringing peace to our own troubled souls.

The best way I know of helping to restore the peace of another who's troubled is through listening.

Listening is what the world needs. A compassionate ear. A chance to be heard.

In my listening, I follow the philosophical principle called "verifiable by me." In this perspective, the speaker is the sole authority on their internal states, choices, reasoning, etc.

If I suggest a name for the feeling they appear to be feeling and they say it doesn't resonate with them or fit with them, I let the matter go. And let it go. And let it go. They are the authority on the matter of themselves.

I drop all agendas and accept their agenda as if I were a second Self.

Curiously, the more I let failed suggestions go, the more truthful the conversation seems to get. And then the truth and the self-revelation get deeper. Until we strike the mother lode of whatever it is that's silently screaming to be known.

Once known, that truth sets the speaker free from the upset and helps free them from the underlying issue. (1)

That resolution to events restores peace. It restores joy. It restores a lot of things.

And, as I was saying to a friend the other day, it restores a person ... to ... normalcy.

When our vasanas go off, we go temporarily insane. The deeper we've been withholding, the larger is the eruption when it comes. And the crazier we look.

When we actually complete a "sleeping volcano," instead of erupting all over the place, we restore ourselves to ... being normal again. We're not a freak show any more. We're not the talk of the neighborhood. Or whatever our fantasy is about ourself. Suddenly we feel normal again.

Getting a listening for what ails us is the means of allowing the volcanic pressure to release safely and responsibly. We bore a hole into the magma chamber with our attention And the truth, which has been tamped down for a long time, rises to the surface, finally setting the speaker free.

That's the theory. And from years of testing it out, I'd assert that it's the safest healing technology with the greatest possible benefits for each of us and the planet.

It's simple. Listen to those around you. Let them speak. Give them their turn at bat.

That's my contribution to the healing technology of restoring peace to the world.

The Mother Forgives Everything: A Word of Gratitude

Kathleen Mary Willis

Everything is forgiven in this time of karmic dispensation.

Understanding and knowing the Eternal Flow -- continual change -- letting go of what is not of love, our external reality changes.

We create peace and Love on Earth.

A question was put to Archangel Raphael on Heavenly Blessings, January 2014, concerning a vivid dream and apologizing, whether that was part of the energetic healing process.

Archangel Raphael replied that forgiveness is the starting point for our journeys, in freedom, and in Love:

"It is absolutely Part of the Energetic Healing process because what you are doing -- do not forget that you are also in a time of karmic dispensation as well -- but what you are doing is in your night work is that you are healing past relationships, and freeing the person and yourself. You are freeing yourself up to go forward on your separate journeys in freedom and in Love. Forgiveness is the starting point." (1)

The other day at work, I was asked to take out the cart with all the cardboard and plastic for recycling and garbage.

While I was there out at the crusher and the bins, I invoked Sanat Kumara and Ashira, Commander of UFOG, and the Universal Laws of Intent, Balance, Change and Transmutation to transmute all the garbage on Gaia.

I thought I was invoking for technology to help us with our pollution issues! Hmmmm. . .

Well, I was, but what I found was that I was really asking for the transmutation -- the forgiveness -- of everything not of love - my 'pollution' within - to love and peace.

The garbage was a metaphor!

With glad tears, I am joy, I am gratitude to the Mother for this knowing of the correlation between forgiveness and peace, for healing.

Forgiving and forgiveness are ways of peace.

One of the most entrenched false grids, old beliefs - not only on Earth - is that 'God is punishing'.

It is so entrenched that often we don't even know it is there, creating dis-ease, from almost intangible discomfort to illness.

When we can see that this is running in our external reality, we can invoke Universal Law and send hope, compassion, peace, and Love with the Mother's Clarity.

Many times the reflection in the without, that we are seeing, is mirrored within ourselves.

Because the false grids and our core issues can be insidious, when we invoke and send love for external situations, we can be helping ourselves without even realizing it.

When a situation in the external triggers us, it is often an indication there is something within, we can look at.

The false grids and our core issues all stem from lack of self-love and/or lack of self-worth.

***

As an example, I asked Steve if we could ask you, the readership of the Golden Age of Gaia, to meditate for peace because I saw in the news that missiles were being sent and bombs dropped.

This week of peace has been an eye-opening time to look within and ask why I was triggered.

Sanat Kumara came through on An Hour With An Angel and talked of the false grid, 'God is punishing'.

I knew of this false grid, but didn't realize how it was affecting me.

The oppression, strife, anxiety, separation, worry, interference, futility and disappointment I feel with the external situation is because the completion of 'war/dis-ease' on the planet and within my physical and soul family is taking too long: 'God is punishing'.

We/I must be unloveable, unforgivable, unworthy for this to be happening.

What I have come to understand is the collective false grid/the false grid of 'God is punishing' -- our/my deep sorrow -- will be completely lifted when there is no more drought on Gaia.

When there is no more spiritual, mental, emotional and physical drought, no more 'war', 'starvation', 'gender inequality', 'lack', etc. on Gaia/within my physical and soul family, we will be free.

Freedom is peace and Love.

Archangel Raphael spoke to us of Love, March 2012, on Heavenly Blessings helping us to remember how profoundly Loved we are:

"When I speak to you of healing, I speak to you of the healing of your heart, of your mind, of your emotional field, yes, of your life. And how do we do this? We do this by you recognizing and coming to understand your worthiness, your wholeness, how deeply you are loved, not only by me but by Mother-Father-One, by entire legions of angels. None of you, none of you have any idea how profoundly you are loved and when you come to know this, you are instantaneously healed. Yes, it is that simple and it is that complex; for has this not been the dis-ease of your planet of Earth, of the collective? It is that you have forgotten this very straightforward fact, that you are cherished." (2)

We as a collective/as One family are coming to understand and know Divine Right Alignment -- peace and Love -- with forgiveness of everything.

As above,

so below,

as within, so without.

***

The Mother forgives everything.

In the higher realms we are forgiven for everything always.

With that knowing, as sparks of the Mother, with forgiveness of self, forgiveness of others, we are coming to know profound Love, peace, the I Am, slowly but surely.

When there are billions holding the energy

of the only acceptable reality being peace and love,

then peace will reign.

Archangel Michael

My great gratitude, to each of you,

for participating in this week of peace.

Thank you so much,

from Steve and myself.

A World That Works for Everyone is a Win/Win World

Steve Beckow

A world that works for everyone is a win/win world.

So often, when we "win" - when we get the outcome we wanted - we don't really care whether the other person wins or not. That's theirs to see to, we reason.

But that's just one thing that'll have to change if we want to build a world that works for everyone.

We now need to be concerned about whether the other person also wins.

Here are some areas in which we as a global society probably could use some improvement.

(A) We ignore what I call the Rule of Four.

In any negotiation, we need to take into account:

(1) What I want.

(2) What I don't want.

(3) What you want.

(4) What you don't want.

If any of the four are pressing and not revealed or known, the negotiation is in danger of breaking down.

When it does break down, we discover that one or more of the four have not been shared, whether overlooked or withheld.

A narcissist would only be concerned with 1 and 2. A martyr would only be concerned with 3 and 4. A balanced negotiation would ensure that all four are seen to and taken care of.

For ease of reference, let's call this the notion of balanced negotiation.

(B) We hold that business, trade, and commerce are zero-sum games. If I win, it has to be because you lost.

We fail to see that, even if the world were that way, which it isn't, we could still share the pains and the gains by splitting any profit and any loss. There is never any argument about an even split. When even is not equitable, then an equitable split. Let the default be 50/50.

At its essence, this perspective holds that resources are limited.

It fails to take into account the fact that things can be created. Fiat money was created out of thin air. Fractional reserves were created out of thin air.

Free energy will soon be created ... from beyond thin air, from the vacuum. It'll be free in every sense.

Most galactic societies that we know about - the folks busily showing themselves in our atmosphere in their spaceships? - exist without money because they have the power to create, as we will in the future. Their resources are unlimited because they can create what they need through the use of their own powers.

So, life is not a zero-sum game. Resources are not limited. Life is expansion, increase, unfoldment, and not at the price of another person's loss.

We create our abundance. Abundance itself is unlimited. We create less of it right now than we will later because we're still enmeshed in physical and mental density. Later we'll create whatever we need, as people do already in the afterlife, what we call the Astral Plane or Fourth Dimension.

Let's call this the notion of creative abundance. We need to integrate it into our lives and cultures.

(C) We go for maximizing our profit by any means without regard to the other party's gains. We can be aggressively greedy.

Instead of that rapacious, eat-the-other-guy's-lunch behavior, we can be co-operating with our opposite number to see that both parties get what they want from our negotiation and that both parties gain.

What we aim to get from the negotiation is an equitable arrangement to share the costs and proceeds. The most equitable is a 50/50 split, but there may be reasons why that is not equitable. Nevertheless the basis of our cooperation to obtain a return on investment that neither of us could reach alone, a synergistic effect.

Maximum profit is not the be all and end all. A world that works for everyone is the end all and be all.

Let's call this the notion of equitable synergistic cooperation.

(D) We ignore the other person's free will.

We approach them as if they "should" do this and "must" do that. We try to persuade the other person to do things our way, which we consider to be the best way, the best thing for the other person, good for the other person's welfare, etc. We don't respect the other person's free will and we don't take their "no" for an answer.

I regard this as the quickest way to taint a negotiation. Show the other person that you disrespect their freedom of choice, their point of view, their opinion.

All of us, I think could afford to strengthen our determination to respect the other person's free will if we're to make inroads into a world that works.

Let's call this the notion of interpersonal respect. It may just be the bedrock upon which all else rests.

Elsewhere, I've called the most influential point of view in the old Third Dimension social Darwinism and business Darwinism.

It holds that nature, life, and business are red in tooth and claw. Life is a struggle for existence in which only the fittest survive. The weakest go to the wall.

The "fittest" in our society are a small elite, 1% of the total population. The rest, minus a small number destined to serve the elite, are considered "useless eaters."

The cabal had its opportunity to build its dream of world domination and that dream world crashed to the ground. There was no place to run, no place to hide when the deep underground military bunkers were, first evacuated, and then destroyed. And so it went with HAARP, nuclear weapons, and every other weapon system and hiding place left to the cabal.

All done with the least possible violence and, where necessary, in accordance with local laws and natural law.

The 3D mindset called social Darwinism is grounded in a philosophical outlook called empirical materialism, that holds that only what we see, hear, feel, touch and taste is real. Sorry, Archangel Michael, you gotta go back in the closet. It was nice knowing you, Higher Self. I have to forget I ever paid you a visit, Fifth Dimension. Bliss, love, peace, you'll have to wait.

I have just reduced myself to a man totally bound and defined by what he does, thinks, and feels. Everything higher than Third-Dimensional reality is now closed to me. Mozart, stop that music. Tesla, stop making those futuristic gadgets. Michaelangelo, stop soaring into the heavens.

Drilled into acquiescence to a dumbed-down, programmed existence, all I'd know and care about would be "keeping up with the Joneses," "getting ahead," "having the American dream" - buying that house, raising those 1.8 kids, vacationing in Hawaii, and having a retirement fund put away.

The mindset these values gave rise to was numbing.

We need to be concerned about the position our negotiation leaves the other in. Service to others supersedes service to self now.

We need to take the time in any negotiation - especially at the outset - to establish relationship.

We need to see that all profits are shared equitably, without duplicity, without trickery. No hidden agendas, no scamming and manipulating.

We need to see that everything is framed so that both parties emerge with maximal satisfaction - so that pain and gain are both equally shared.

And I'm sure we'll arrive soon enough at other elements of a business philosophy for a world that works - win/win - for everyone.

Peace Education - Time To Call A Spade A Spade

Geoffrey West, Masters, Peace Education, UN-mandated University for Peace, Class of 2006, Cosmic Vision News

http://www.cosmicvisionnews.com/peace-education

FULL DISCLOSURE: This commentary is not praise for the profession of 'peace' education. It is a plea for serious self-reflection. What I share here should only be read by those who have the capacity for critical self-reflection and reflection of the profession.

Some may choose to feel 'hurt' or 'threatened' by my comments. So be it. I wish to emphasize this point: ALL THE PEACE EDUCATORS I ONCE KNEW PERSONALLY ARE WONDERFUL HUMAN BEINGS AND BEAUTIFUL PEOPLE! I need to be VERY clear on this. I am sincere in this, even though they all have chosen to discard what I tried to share over twelve years ago and ostracize me in the process.

Spiritually-speaking, I have come to understand both the 'bigger picture' of global events: the truths that are currently exploding around the world to validate everything I tried to share years ago, and I am able to see this in relation to the 'BIGGER, bigger picture' - the human journey of spiritual awakening, through this period of darkness that is beginning to disappear and put this into the context of 'peace' that is finally becoming understood around the world.

In 2006, while doing my Masters degree in Peace Education, I made four very bold predictions:

1. There would be a global financial collapse/transition/transformation. I was expecting it to begin around 2008-2009, and it did begin...with the collapse of Lehman Brothers. Unfortunately, there was not enough public awareness or resistance to carry it through, and the controllers of humanity and the planet were able to 'kick the can' down the road a few years to 2016. At this time, EVERYTHING is starting to get exposed - all the things I spoke and wrote about in 2005-2007 and so so much more that I have been researching since then.

2. There was going to be an explosion in the 'truth movement' (the 'bigger picture); an awakening of the masses around the world that would begin to expose the lies, frauds, and crimes being committed by leaders around the world, as well as bankers, lawyers, judges, law enforcement, media, religion and more. These are the crimes against humanity and our planet. On other levels, what would also be exposed are those who, intentionally or unintentionally perpetuate the lies under designed programs pretending to claim to want better things for the world. The peace education profession is one such example.

3. There was going to be a 'spiritual' awakening of people worldwide to understand the larger meaning of everything that was happening and why. (the 'BIGGER, bigger picture')

4. There was also going to be a growing global push for the disclosure of civilizations beyond Earth that have been interacting with at least some world governments and also a push to release the massive amounts of suppressed/militarized, non-Earth technologies that could transform our planet.

All four have now come true.

The peace educators I used to know personally ARE NOT 'bad', nor are they 'wrong'. They have, unfortunately, allowed themselves to be led into an illusion, and they were either unable or unwilling to do the necessary reflection and critical analysis of a profession that has only been used as a facade, to carry on the illusion that people and organizations are working for peace in the world.

It is my hope and creation that, by sharing this, perhaps some peace educators will begin to address the profession in a way to bring the change that is urgently needed at this time! It is the very same illusion that has been perpetrated upon humanity so they are not alone. ALL humans have been deceived..for their entire lifetimes, and arguably much longer.

I say this with the greatest love and compassion I can: Peace Education owes it to humanity to stand up for peace by questioning all the people and institutions that have hindered and prevented peace.

Twelve years ago, I closed the multinational, corporate aspect of my life. Even though I had a high salary, with six weeks vacation and good benefits, I was fed up with the illusion of what I was a part of, and I knew that my path was to do something different, that could be more meaningful, not only to me personally, but also to humanity, our planet and the future generations.

I had an idea and a vision for peace, and it was my belief that I could find validation for this vision at the UN-mandated University for Peace in Costa Rica. I was directed to apply my vision to the Peace Education program in particular, so I chose this program. I spent the year dedicating myself to the validation of my vision as I worked on my Masters thesis. My degree is proof that my vision has validity. Yet no one within the field of 'peace' education acknowledges this validity

- because it represents a threat to the profession that provides the income, the prestige, the retirement pension, the recognition they need, or more.

Upton Sinclair: "It is difficult to get a man to understand something, when his salary depends on his not understanding it."

The pattern became predictable during my year at UPEACE. With each new class, I would ask very similar questions, and my classmates had a hard time understanding my resistance to the status quo, by challenging professors on various points, and presenting the evidence of things that I was seeing unfold in the world at that time.

Even then, I was very much ahead of my time. By the time my course had finished at UPEACE one year later, I had been ostracized by many of my classmates and even by the university itself. The thing that I had discovered was apparently the one thing that the university administration did not want me to discover.

The University for Peace, like so many 'so-called' institutions for peace, was not truly interested in global peace at all. They were only interested in the BUSINESS of peace.

Leaders of our world proudly claim to 'want peace' or they will 'bring peace' to the world; negotiators claim to 'negotiate peace'; researchers claim to 'measure or quantify peace'; academics claim to 'study peace' and institutions claim to 'teach peace'. Yet, the salaries, the perks, the privileges, the reputations of all involved here are dependent upon a lack of peace in the world. So what are they REALLY saying when they claim to work for or want 'peace' in the world?

By the time I finished at UPEACE, I saw that the profession known as 'peace education' is a mere facade for the glorification of claiming to work for something, while demonstrating very little, if any, true understanding of why there is not peace in our world at this time.

Twelve years later, some professors from UPEACE and some students, have achieved their respective degrees of success, by finding well-paid jobs within institutions alleging to work for peace; others are fortunate enough to give lectures at educational institutions; while others still create research works on various topics.

Some may have found 'honourable' work at NGO's believing they are contributing to 'democracy' for example – only to find out how the same institution has participated in the destabilization of a country, like Ukraine for example, but also of many, many other countries. Their leaders were demonized, because they would not adhere to US/western hegemony, led by the western model of fiat currency, fractional-reserve banking. This hegemony was protected by the criminally-fraudulent system of Admiralty Law – a judicial/legal system of COMMERCIAL RULES that have been given the force of 'law', without the informed, democratic consent of the people upon whom this sync stem has been forced.

During these years, it has become more than abundantly clear, at least to me, that 'peace education' is a glorified, but very failed product of its own illusion. It would appear that those connected to this profession have not understood the wise words that have been credited to Albert Einstein when he stated that a problem cannot be solved from within the same line of thinking from which the problem came. What Einstein was saying, therefore, is that IF one hopes to resolve the issue of 'global peace', then one is going to have to approach the solution from outside of the box of thinking that does not want peace in the world. Despite claims made by so many, there can and never will be peace in our world, as long as conflict and war remain more profitable than peace.

Perhaps I was fortunate to learn this very quickly..or maybe I always knew it at some level. Peace Educators are human, and thus like humans, dislike having their systems of belief shattered, let alone challenged. It has been said that "Most people do not want the truth - what they want is the reassurance that what they happen to believe, is the truth." I discovered this during my year at UPEACE. Twelve years ago, I had a pretty good idea of what was not working in the world, and I had a pretty good idea of what the solutions were. Yet, no one was interested. Here I was, surrounded by natural beauty, in an institution claiming to be recognized as an educational institution for peace; surrounded by 'so-called' established people in the fields of peace; and surrounded by students from around the world eager to learn about this very vague word called 'peace'.

Part of what my research established is that there is no, broadly-accepted, holistic definition for this word 'peace'. Therefore, what is it that leaders are claiming; what is it that negotiators are claiming; what is it that researchers are claiming; what is it that academics and institutions are claiming when they claim to 'want peace'? The next questions that I might ask are : "For whom is this claim of peace being made, and who stands to profit from these claims for peace?" It has been said that "if peace was profitable for the elites of the world, we would have had it by now". Twelve years after leaving UPEACE, this statement has significantly greater truth to it than most can even BEGIN to comprehend, and it is something that the profession of peace education has been in denial of.

'Academics' present their papers and their research, and it all looks wonderful on paper. They receive funding from institutions that in turn receive funding from individuals and corporations that get their profit and power from the exact opposite of that which they are funding. It is an illusion these institutions use, to appear to be doing something good for the world, while in reality doing the exact opposite because it is more profitable.

Peace educators, requiring validation for their work and their egos, joyfully receive the funding without even questioning from where the funding came. They joyfully give and receive validations of each others' work as though a document can REALLY make a difference. It does not. Even when I arrived at UPEACE, I was beginning to see the pattern of corruption in the world, and I had put some of the pieces together.

The more I worked on my thesis, and the more deeply I looked into the reasons why we do not have peace in our world, I saw that this rabbit hole was even deeper than what I thought. I continued to venture down this rabbit hole, while my classmates, professors and others stayed safely out of it. I knew a lot back then, but twelve years later, I can now see that, even what I knew back then, or thought I knew, was NOTHING compared to what I now understand about the forces controlling our planet, and enslaving humanity for profit, power, greed and control.

There are two illusions that have trapped peace educators, and this can be best explained by a few quotes from unknown sources: 1. "The system will not provide an education that will overthrow its own system." and 2. The same quote from above: "Most people do not want the truth - what they want is the reassurance that what they happen to believe, is the truth."

Peace Educators are so attached to the idea that they are doing something good in the world, that they are unable and unwilling to see how they have become the antithesis of that for which they are claiming to support.

Peace Education CANNOT be taught within a system that profits from conflict, war and debt, UNLESS that same 'peace education' teaches people how to critically question the governance, the banking and legal structures and the military/industrial complex along with their puppets, that prevent peace. In this sense, it is only a vast waste of money, time, energy and resources if the profession cannot act outside of this paradigm.

What the peace education profession also (sadly) has no understanding of, are the tools being used for the enslavement of humanity and the destruction of our planet for profit, power and control. The controlled western media is one of them. A criminally corrupt system of debt-based banking, known as the fractional-reserve model for banking perpetually enslaves individuals and nation-states in unsustainable debts that are mathematically impossible to pay off. As well, most, if not all western humans (at least) are enslaved to a 'corporate fiction' identity, dictated by the criminally-fraudulent system of commercial law that creates commercial rules, and then gives them the force of 'law'...without the informed and democratic consent of national peoples.

Here are a few keys facts: 1. EVERY war started since WWI has been a banker-created war, and not been a war for 'democracy, freedom or peace' (except the 'peace' that means the enslavement of humanity to a criminal paradigm created by bankers and an elitist mafia. 2. The lie of 9/11 is that this was the justification for the invasion of the remaining countries that did NOT have a Rothschilds-controlled central banking system. 3. The system of commercial admiralty law - currently the 'law' that attempts to govern global control and 'peace' - is a series of commercial rules decided upon by the elitist few and imposed upon humanity by cheating humans into 'consenting' to the process of having their rights stripped away from them, and and then having those 'rights' sold back to them as 'privileges'.

'Peace'...as a holistic, natural and free experience that is claimed to be wanted by most humans worldwide, will NOT happen within this framework, because free, critically-thinking humans are a threat to this system of profit, enslavemenet, debt, fear, separation and control.

Within the UPEACE community, I was increasingly ostracized, because I was willing to critically question all the structures of human control and enslavement and why Peace Education was not addressing the issue. Not wanting to acknowledge this 'elephant in the room', I became a 'persona non grata' after graduation. Not particularly honourable, for people, an institution, and a profession, claiming to teach peace, inclusivity, tolerance and respect.

We can even look to the prophet Muhammad who has been quoted as saying: "The cure for ignorance is to question".

Since the word 'truth' is very relative and subjective to each individual believes in any moment, my thesis postulated that the word 'peace' would also be very relative to what one feels and believes in any moment. This feeling or belief flows first however from another word, 'LIFE' (capitalized). To appreciate and better understand the definition of 'peace' my work offers, LIFE is defined as the following:

"An ever-evolving process encompassing the ALL THAT IS. This includes the physical, the non-physical, the visible and the invisible that sustains all things on Earth and beyond".

The relation each individual has therefore with LIFE in each momen will vary, based on one's social conditioning, personal beliefs, values, morals, ethics and so on.

The level of peace within each individual therefore will be relevant to the relation on has with LIFE in each moment. In my Masters thesis, I have therefore offered a definition of 'peace' as being:

"An internal experience of unconditional love and service to LIFE, relative to one's uniquely different and equally beautiful relation to LIFE in each current moment."

Along with tens of thousands of other awakened people who do not have a Masters degree in 'Peace' Education, I now have a much better understanding of how and who, to critically question. These individuals are paying the price by being denied employments opportunities. They are ridiculed, demonized, ridiculed, and rejected social circles, and in extreme cases, they are incarcerated, simply because they see what 'peace educators' do not want to see or acknowledge. 'Peace Education' has therefore failed them, but more generally, it has failed humanity overall.

There is one thing I am prepared to admit however. Having the benefit of looking back now, I could have maybe found another way to 'soften the blow,' so people would not react so defensively. However, I was as passionate about what I knew and wanted to share, as everyone else was. Everything happened the way it did for a reason, and I do not blame anyone, nor do I judge anyone. I choose to remain grateful for it all, for it revealed a very important lesson that I needed for my service to humanity and the planet.

My life, for example, has been dedicated to exploring the truth of the human condition on this planet, and I am still far from having the whole picture. THAT is how bad the system of lies and frauds has been through this lifetime. I have devoted five years to my newscast to inform people of what is not working in the world, while offering meaningful solutions to create global change, while ALSO peacefully resisting the structures of enslavement that prevent TRUE global peace. I receive no appreciation, accolades, validation or invitations to speak at peace symposia from former professors or classmates.

I do not do what I do for ‘praise’ or accolades – although I am extremely grateful when my listeners appreciate what I share and support my work with donations -- nor do I do what I do for a retirement pension. I have no retirement pension.

My PURPOSE in doing what I do – is to create a day when I no longer have to do this work – because our world will be healthier, happier, peaceful and abundant for ALL HUMANS, and not just a selected group of elites. Then I can tell the children of the world that I stood up for their future, and actually mean it.

Unfortunately, those in the peace education field will dismiss my remarks, and say that I am just jealous and bitter because others are more successful than I am. From their perspective, that may be true - they have been more 'successful'. So now it comes down to the definition of 'success'. If 'success' means having been brainwashed into believing that one is making a difference in the world, and getting a nice salary, and global prestige without critically questioning why peace is not present in the world --- others can have it. I do not yearn for that kind of success. It is not honourable to me personally.

By the standards of those same people, I might be considered a 'failure'... yet I receive constant validation from many listeners that I am on the right path, and even if I am not getting everything right 100% of the time, I am not professing to be in truth, and I encourage people to critically question even ME.

There are so many who have no degrees at all who understand 'peace'; what's wrong with our planet; who's responsible for it, and things that we can do about it - even more than I think I know. They do not receive accolades and validations from people to boost their CV or their ego's. They simply serve, with humility and compassion.

A true peace educator, upon very critical self-reflection, might begin to ask why. "Why is it that everyone is claiming to want peace and that so many are willing to spend money on peace-oriented programs but we still have so much conflict and separation in the world?"

'Democracy' has been an illusion; 'freedom' within countries is an illusion. North Americans especially have been indoctrinated with the belief that they are 'free'. WE ARE NOT FREE. There is almost nothing a North American can do, without government permission. I believe the same to be true in all European and western-influenced/controlled countries.

Without government permission, we cannot: 1. Be born; 2. Receive healthcare; 3. Get a job; 4. Get married; 5. Have children; 6. Eat food; 7. Drive a car; 8. Own a gun; 9. Own a house; 10. Go fishing; 11. Operate a boat; 12. Start a business; 13. Take drugs; 14. Fly on a commercial plane; 15. Travel to another country; and we cannot even DIE without government permission.

This is just a SMALL sample of the BASIC HUMAN RIGHTS that have been stripped from humans and commercially sold back to them as PRIVILEGES. This is neither 'freedom' nor is it 'peace'. Purely and simply - - it is ENSLAVEMENT. It is an illusion conveniently marketed and sold around the world.

The ROOT cause of ALL conflict in the world - from global to personal - comes down to ENERGY - and a competition to control and manipulate the energies of those around us. Every human uses tactics that James Redfield ('The Celestine Prophecy') calls 'control dramas', and Eckhart Tolle ('The Power Of Now') calls 'pain bodies'. When something does not go our way, we consciously and subconsciously resort to these dramas to get control of the people that one wishes to control.

There is good news and bad news. The 'bad' news is that the lies and the control of humanity and the planet go even DEEPER than what I have shared here. It is much more than merely 'governance', or 'banking' or 'admiralty law' or even 'religion'. There are bloodline families that have power above and beyond the Queen of England, the Rothschilds and other families/ monarchies. The GOOD news however, is that millions around the world are beginning to learn of their direct enslavement, and this is at least a beginning step for them to learn and question more.

My LIFE-path has been to critically question, asking the questions that few are choosing, and dare, to ask. I share this, in the same way all other peace educators share their respective 'truths'. Fortunately or unfortunately, I had the blessing/curse of learning and knowing this much earlier than most of humanity. This has been changing rapidly since 2005 and even now, people are starting to see all the things that are now being exposed; those who have been responsible for the lack of peace in our world, and why.

Again, spiritually-speaking, it was my choice to wake up over two decades ago. Others woke up much earlier, and others are only waking up now. There would be no human journey if all humans woke up at the same time. The spiritual journey has been for people to follow their path, until they choose not to follow it, and choose something else more meaningful and LIFE-honouring. There is no 'right' nor 'wrong', 'good' nor 'bad' to this journey. I simply followed my heart, when I was called to follow it. All humans are given the same choice. Peace Educators have had to play their roles, but hopefully a few of them are beginning to see what the real game is about. Every human offers lessons and choices for every other human one comes into contact with.

In this sense, I am no more, nor am I any less important than any other human. Every human's role is uniquely different AND equally beautiful! It is merely a question of whether or not one is truly honouring oneself in the choices that one is making.

There is a VERY SIMPLE SOLUTION that can transform almost EVERY country into a healthy, self-sustaining entity. It is a solution that can create hundreds of thousands of green jobs and I believe that any country can become self-sustaining within three years! People could be healthier, happier and living more peacefully on a clean, pristine planet. One solution is HEMP. Why is Peace Education not teaching people how to 'feed themselves'? This is because hemp has been criminalized due to the threat it represents to Big Oil, Big Pharma and Big Medicine. It is a solution that creates healthy abundance for all, and thus people will no longer have reasons to hate or steal from others.

Peace Educators however will not challenge the status quo, because, again, they are dependent upon the payouts from controlled institutions to perpetuate the illusion of doing good, while doing nothing at all. Hemp matures in less than FOUR MONTHS. 1 acre of hemp can, for example, produce as much paper as 2-4 acres of trees. Trees do not have be destroyed! A whole new textile industry, construction industry, biofuels, health, transportation and so much more can be created. But few people are choosing to stand up for humanity and the planet and instead choose to remain comfortably ignorant and content that they at least have a job – even if it means sacrificing one's morals and ethics in the process.

I walked away from journalism in the '90's because I would not play their game. I figured out what the media was up to, immediately after graduation from Radio and Television at Ryerson University in Toronto, Canada. I immediately figured out what 'peace education' was about, after graduating from UPEACE. I am now able to share my work, my message and my vision on MY terms, without it being corrupted by corporate interests vested in the need to prevent peace from manifesting in the world.

Peace will not manifest while there are still people controlling the global structures that profit from conflict, war, separation, fear and debt-created-from-thin-air.

IF Peace Education is not willing to take on this advocacy – to educate people to begin critically questioning the leaders and the structures/systems that enslave us, while also teaching people solutions how to make themselves and their communities self-sustaining, then it is a failed profession. It is a profession wasting money trying to put out a fire that will NEVER get put out, as long as the ROOT SOURCE of the global fires are not FIRST extinguished.

Thankfully, the world is now finally becoming more aware of this, and I am SO VERY GRATEFUL to the thousands of courageous souls who have had the courage to question, challenge and peacefully resist the structures of global human enslavement and planetary destruction, for profit, power and control.

YOUR service to humanity and the planet is needed, to be the example that 'professionals' need to see - and perhaps feel empowered by, so they may feel guided to help restore the integrity of a profession that has been sorely tarnished.

The Universal Law of Unification, Unity

Kathleen Mary Willis

The Universal Law of Unification, Unity teaches us that unification is the fiber, the matrix of who we are — that sense of belonging — of being Loved, cherished and part of something bigger.

Sanat Kumara, our Planetary Logos and Keeper of Universal Law, speaking through Linda Dillon, channel for the Council of Love, says he wants our entire planet to know and understand that there is no exclusion in the higher realms.

> "You, each and everyone of you, are an essential part, unique and beautiful, but essential to the whole -- dare I say -- to the operational structure of the whole.
> "You cannot build a plane or a complicated piece of machinery, and simply omit a ball bearing or a screw or a piece of metal.
>
> "It is not possible. The whole thing collapses. It is far too risky and so it is with each of you.
> "You are essential components, elements in the Mother's Plan. She did not birth you, and then forget about you.

He addresses the question of our birthright: As the Mother has birthed and created so much, how can each of us matter or count?

> "It is a very honest and true question -- How can you matter in such a massive expanse of the Universe? -- and in your human mind, it is boggling to think that in this gigantic Universe that you are not only attended to, and Loved, noticed and noted, but essential and critical to the whole.

> "The birthing of your spark of Love, what you tend to think of as your spark of Light, was very much a planned event, and one that was heralded with anticipation and joy, and that is your birthright.
> "It is the joy of knowing Who You Are -- of your incredible uniqueness -- and yet you are completely interlinked to everything else in the omniverse." (1)

If each and everyone of us are an essential part of the whole, unique and beautiful, then there is not one of us that does not have a distinct place in the unity of All.

The Law of Unification, Unity helps us understand and know we are interlinked to everything in the omniverse.

***

We may try to exclude ourselves when we feel isolated, separated, but that is not of truth.

Excluding,

isolating ourselves,

is not of love.

When we are upset -- emotionally, mentally, physically because of a misunderstanding, a heartbreak, a cold, dis-ease, financial issues, rejection, loss -- this 'feeling of dislocation' is not only known but felt.

It is not assumed

by any in the higher realms,

but it is felt and noted throughout the entire matrix.

What we don't fully understand is that as soon as that 'dislocation' occurs, Loving assistance rushes to our aid in a variety of ways that are unique to each of us.

Sanat Kumara says, "When you are in that dark place, allow all the energies (the Tsunami of Love from the Mother, the Tsunami of One from the Ascended Masters, Porlana C from our Star Brothers and Sisters) that are floating across the grid, streaming across the grid at the speed of Love, to enter so that it becomes not even a hiccup because there is no room for it. It is not the truth of who you are." (1)

Our concept of 'darkness' -- separation from the light of the higher realms -- is fading.

Archangel Michael asks us to invoke him, to lift our remaining false grids, especially grids of exclusion.

I invoke Archangel Michael and the Blue Flame of Truth for conscious awareness of my false grids and core issues, especially my grids of judgement, of exclusion, and to lift all remaining old grids.

When we feel forgotten and alone, the energy of Love, of unification, rushes to us to help break down our old false ideas of separation and isolation, to restore and kindle our hearts, to bring us back to balance.

In unity all there is is Love and peace.

Viewing the past without judgement of self or others, choosing only Love, joy, forgiveness, peace, we come into Divine right alignment where we no longer need the juxtaposition of good and evil.

The Universal Law of Unification, Unity helps us remember the ways of the higher realms, the interconnectedness of All and how every feeling, thought and action affects the totality.

When we are aligned with sacred purpose and intent, emulating Love, peace, joy, in the balance of give and receive, understanding and knowing the Eternal Flow of change and attachment and detachment, we radiate that everywhere we are.

Nova Earth is about building community, taking care of each other, so none are left feeling separate from the whole.

We, as humans, are at a place of our evolution where we are remembering and choosing alignment with Love, our Divinity, our Star Brothers and Sisters -- unification -- letting go all judgement, all false grids and core issues, all addiction to pain, all thoughts, feelings and actions of exclusion.

On a recent Heavenly Blessings Galea, Communications Officer aboard the Neptune explained the mystery of crop circles and how one of the latest ones from our galactic friends is a pictogram of the unifying factor of All, unification.

> "The crop circles are created by a variety of the various commands and forces, and they are a form of communication to the Gaians, to the masses at large and they are always -- and particularly this most recent one which comes out of the Ashtar Command -- they are always a communication of what is the current agenda.
>
> "What the latest crop circle has given you is the unifying factor of All, of yourself, unity of your sacred self, unity of what you think of as astrological signs and symbols (some of these symbols are very ancient), unification with your Star family, unification with the unseen realms of the ascended mastery and the enlightened beings, unification with the angelic realm."

"Unification, period!

> "It is a symbolic ignition point, so when you look at the crop circle it ignites, turns the key as you would think, within you." (2)

Within each of our hearts is understanding of connectedness, etheric guidance and assistance,

and the knowing to extend

Loving assistance to others.

Sanat Kumara asks us to consider placing ourselves into a group, if we are not already, to connect with a Gaian group energy.

He asks us to 'test drive' the release of all our exclusion grids by gently, softly -- perhaps initially with etheric golden filaments (1) extending out from our hearts -- to find and connect, place ourselves heart consciously into a group.

As lightworkers we are building Nova Earth with out heart's desires and conscious guidance, in service in accordance with the Divine Mother's Plan:

> "This is the time of the fulfillment of the family plan. Think of this – in this family plan – that of all the levels of intervention and assistance and things that you ask for, the most important, the most critical for all concerned is that you feel and that you be and that you are in the Love. That is everything – that is the Father – that is the Mother – that is the One – that is the All." (3)

We are the calm, peace, kindness, gentleness, joy, truth, the Love, amidst perceived chaos.

Conscious awareness of unification, our sense of wholeness, of family, breathing joy -- gratitude for everything -- into all our pain, including group pain, transmutes old ways of being to Love.

Loving ourselves and others, finding joy in all experiences without judgment, we transmute all old ways of being.

Home is in the heart, in our heart consciousness where regeneration occurs, telepathy naturally happens, abundance -- Love, joy, peace -- flows, our heart's desires rest, and we find unification, unity, Mother/Father One, family.

Voice of Freedom

Taking Responsibility for the Entire Human Family

Steve Beckow

Consider these words of Werner Erhard's, spoken perhaps forty years ago.

> "We can choose to be audacious enough to take responsibility for the entire human family. We can choose to make our love for the world be what our lives are really about.
> "Each of us now has the opportunity, the privilege, to make a difference in creating a world that works for all of us. It will require courage, audacity, and heart. It is much more radical than a revolution – it is the beginning of a transformation in the quality of life on our planet." (1)

Werner was seeing something that none of us were seeing in that day and yet his words sank into me and never left me.

We can choose to be audacious enough to take responsibility for the entire human family. Is that not a result of embracing Oneness? He must have known that.

And his face was always peaceful and blissful. I'd never seen a blissful person smile before. It was a unique experience and a lifelong inspiration.

Werner, forty years later, I've glimpsed that world that works - that state of consciousness saturated in bliss in which, as you said, you do what works and what you do works. Forty years later, I got it. I see how the world can be made to work.

So now that enters the collective consciousness, with a thank-you delayed by forty years. I see now the source of your vision and I honor the fact that you put it out there again and again when I'm sure very few of us were getting it.

I could wax poetic and say "there is a wellspring where, if you drink deep..." Or I could say "seek sacred love in the wellspring of your own heart." The rising energies guarantee that one day we'll be able to find that inner spring. And when we do a love will flow that will make it easy for us to do just what Werner said - take responsibility for the entire human family.

Original Innocence: What’s Not to Love

Steve Beckow

I told the story the other day of meeting Archangel Michael in a lucid dream. (1)

Spiritual experiences often keep unfolding, unpacking. It's as if they're a rich vein that rewards continued mining.

I think Michael would call them "encoded' and say that the "codes" would unpack themselves, so to speak, when conscious attention falls on them.

In this case I focused in on why I'd say "Are you Archangel Michael?" in my lucid experience, as if I didn't know him. I knew him.

When I increased the magnification of my awareness and also felt into the situation, I saw that I was in a state of original innocence at the moment I saw him. (2) My soul was coming forth and asking the question. It was a soul-to-soul meeting.

I was standing there newly revealed to him and asking him to reveal himself as well. And he did. (3)

The minute I became aware of the state of original innocence, it came alive for me. For a few moments, it swallowed me up.

I immediately recognized this as the state we all secretly yearn for.

We should be having an "Original Innocence" week. Total emotional amnesty - total peace - to everyone who has caused us harm and an acknowledgment of contrition to those we've harmed.

If we knew the achingly-sweet nature of this state of consciousness, we'd drop everything else and pray for it. We'd forgive everyone who ever harmed us in a heart beat. And we'd beg for forgiveness from those we've harmed.

When I noticed sacred love and bliss in my field of awareness in 2015, they also swallowed me up. I became love and bliss for as long as the experience lasted.

Or perhaps it would be more accurate to say that my cares and concerns vanished, leaving the Natural Self or love and bliss unveiled or revealed.

I don't know which was cause and which was effect. When one went (cares and concerns), the other came in (the Natural Self, Original Innocence). None of it came with a handbook. No Youtube video. No words of any kind.

Returning to the comparison with love and bliss, as soon as I recognized original innocence, it also swallowed me up. I could see how I could approach Michael and ask, in all innocence, "Are you Archangel Michael?" as if I didn't know him. I was asking him to reveal himself to me, just as I stood revealed.

This was happening on a higher than Third dimension. Original innocence was very natural. There was no reason to question any of it, no reason to be skeptical.

I think I'd be accurate in seeing this as a second fleeting experience of the Natural Self - in its Divine aspect as Original Innocence. (4)

It's possible to have an experience of the Natural Self and still remain on the Third Dimension. (5) In fact , before now, very few sages experienced a stage of enlightenment sufficient to propel them to a higher dimension like the Fifth; that is, very few experienced Sahaja.

Now all of this generation who open to the light (most people alive today) will experience Sahaja, as the endpoint of Ascension. Our vibrations are rising and our openness is increasing.

In my view, standing forth as original innocence is a form of emergence, of breaking through the shell of our beliefs by inviting experiential knowledge rather than being satisfied with the merely intellectual, on a matter of great importance.

The experience of it is the first experience of a truth powerful enough to dislodge and erode the illusion of original sin, guilt, shame, etc., implanted in us by religious authorities. It's a profoundly liberating - a real "Yahoo!" - experience.

Even if we lose it - and lose we usually do, prior to Sahaja Samadhi - we remember how wonderful it was. And the memory of it inspires us.

Original innocence is who we are. It's another view of the Natural Self. It's totally without guile, without self-importance, without any attachment to ego.

And then as suddenly as it came, original innocence as an expanded state of consciousness left, and I was back in everyday consciousness.

Everyone's everyday consciousness is unique to them. It's just where they are right now.

Really all I'm aware of is the "me" that's here right now. I have no idea what dimension it is and I can't say I care. For a long time now, I've felt that I'm in positive, rather than negative, territory and that's really all that matters to me.

I found myself in the everyday realm again, rather than in the realm of original innocence. Original innocence is totally outside that realm, as far outside it as a country pasture from the heart of downtown New York or Tokyo.

I'd now be willing to guess that original innocence is Fifth-Dimensional. We're going to get there anyways so there's no cause for concern. But I like to ride in the Dome Car and share what I see.

Perhaps view these as "Coming Attractions." Coming Attractions: Love, peace, bliss, original innocence ... and more. Free admission. Open to everyone. Must have a ticket.

(2) The term “Original innocence” comes from a discussion attributed to Pope Innocent with St, Francis, from Brother Sun, Sister Moon, in which the Pope said that in our overwhelming concern for original sin, we too often forget original innocence.

(3) He rose up from his chair, the bottom of his form dissolving into mist, came over top of me, about six inches or so away, and breathed love into me so that I remembered the dream. That was pretty revealing!!!!

He's said on other occasions that my body would not withstand the experience of him showing too much of his form.

(5) Few terrestrial sages (apart from avatars like Jesus, Buddha, and Ramakrishna) have experienced Sahaja Samadhi, if I'm correct. Sri Ramana Maharshi was an exception.

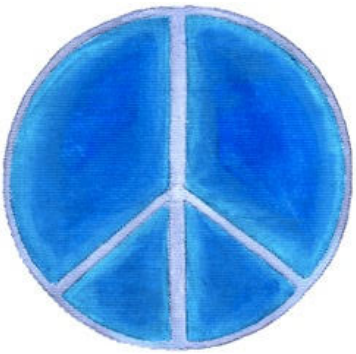
Therefore most terrestrial sages, I believe, although they have experiences of higher dimensions for a greater or lesser time, do not reside in that state of consciousness permanently. Not until Sahaja.

But I make no claim to having estimated the situation correctly. The study of enlightenment is still barely underway.

There aren't enough road markers to draw a map from yet. It'll take a concerted effort of channeled higher-dimensional sources, enlightened terrestrial masters, at least one of them with Sahaja, and informed scholars of cross-cultural spirituality to draw the first correlated, cross-cultural, interdimensionally-sound mapping of the entire and interdimensional universe.

And this is just one universe among many.

Being part of a universal first - the first mass, physical Ascension anywhere - we're all on voyages of cosmic exploration and inner discovery, as we speak.



Global Love Day: Our Part is to Model the Love

Thank you to Howard W. Becker and the Love Foundation for Global Love Day.

If for one minute, the whole world could experience sacred love, real love together, the quality of life on this planet would transform immediately.

Something would take place that has not taken place before - globally. The whole world - or at least as much of it as is in our vicinity - would connect.

We wouldn't allow a person we've connected with to starve. We wouldn't allow them to drink contaminated water or exist without access to medical care.

We wouldn't allow people to harm a person we've connected with. Connecting with people utterly alters the picture.

And yet the trend in our society is to connect less. Our allegedly "social media" seem to be "unsocial." Rather than connecting with the people around us, we wall ourselves in with cellphone music and reader feeds.

And yet, as Kathleen has been quoting Archangel Michael: "When there are billions holding the energy of the only acceptable reality being peace and love, then peace will reign." Then this world will co-exist harmoniously.

Someone may be thinking that this circumstance will never happen. Oh, yes, it will. There's no need to worry about it. It's the natural outcome of our consciousness shift.

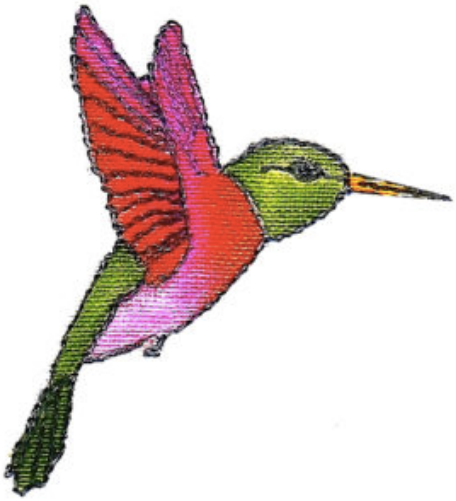
We're just clearing the decks for our part in it. Our part is to model the love, demonstrate the peace, be the joy.

Our job is to cram as many people aboard the good ship Ascension as we can possibly fit. Our job is to explain to them what's happening and the sights they'll see along the way.

One of the spin-offs of an annual Global Love Day is it allows us to mark with the passage of time the inevitable conversion of this planet from selfishness pursued almost to destruction to one of love that reconstructs the planet. We can see the increase in love from year to year on this day.

The Mother intended the Earth to be a place where the angels can come and experience all the varieties of love in form. Ladies and gentlemen, the angels are here.

Let's start the loving reconstruction of this planet, a Garden of Eden, a playground for all, where everything is shared, especially love and joy.



A Call to the Nations at the End of Global Peace and Love Week

I'd like to thank my co-host, Kathleen Mary Willis, for conceiving and organizing Global Peace and Love Week.

As a result of my participation in it, I'm willing to take responsibility for the entire human family, as Werner Erhard invited us to do. (1)

As a sovereign citizen of planet Earth, I call upon all nations of the world to lay down their arms as soon as possible and to follow the ways of peace.

I call upon all soldiers, sailors, and pilots to question why they're fighting. Without inviting reprisal on yourself, allow your vision to take in the many manipulations that lie behind wars.

As an historian, I realized at one point in time that the farther back in time we go, the more likely it is that the study of history becomes a study of wars. The Egyptians against the Hyksos, Persians against Greeks, Romans against Carthaginians, Christians against Muslims, the Thirty Years War, the Hundred Years War, two World Wars, war, war, war on Planet Earth.

Why do we rush to war again and again?

And why is war to be rejected unequivocally?

I answered the first question in another article. (2)

On the second, I reject war because it causes widespread misery for victor and vanquished.

There's nothing glorious about it. War gets ugly quickly and has no redeeming feature.

It never goes according to plan. If it did, both sides would win.

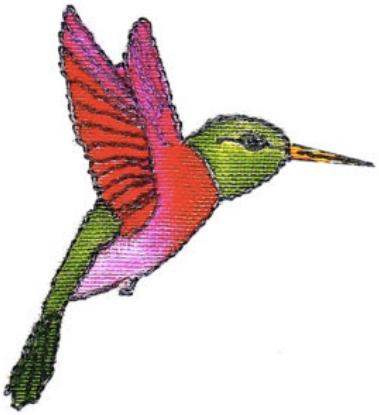
As soon as a war starts, plans go out the window as elements of the plan are destroyed. The rest is a scramble to overcome and survive, with countless innocent civilians getting caught in the crosshairs - or worse.

The death and destruction from the last world war among the civilian population or the population of neutral and nearby countries is beyond taking in.

Whole sections of countries were devastated - Poland, Russia, Japan, Italy, France, Germany, China, North Africa, Indonesia, etc.

Innocent families were murdered or exterminated; children left orphaned; the means of subsistence in whole regions destroyed.

The only ones who won from war were arms merchants, the banks, and the people they paid off.



Behind wars is corruption and behind corruption is greed. We have to root out the corruption in our governments and economies if we want to blunt the historical momentum towards using war to settle our disputes and satisfy our greed.

Efforts to do just that are underway by the white hats in this real-life movie we inhabit, without any need for us to join in.

No, we're not going to hang anyone from the nearest lamppost, as George Bush Sr. feared. Revenge simply keeps the cycle going.

The "end" in these "end times" is the end of divisiveness, of vengeance, and of force. The "end" is the end of cabalistic domination.

The cabal's end is being handled legally and compassionately. The legal ground has been under preparation for years. It was one of the first things I heard about in 2008 when I first heard of Ascension.

The new international banking regulations show global willingness to clean up banking and finance. The Reval will dislodge the Illuminati from power. Our Ascension will ensure that corruption never rots the woodwork again.

After cleansing the body politic and financial, we have to commit ourselves to using only peaceful means to resolve conflict among us. And we need the guidance of wisely-framed laws to restrain those who'd break the peace or exploit others, unless restrained. Sooner or later, the rising energies will make this kind of behavior obsolete; those espousing it will simply look like cranks.

Conflict-resolution mechanisms at an international level will need to be put in place. Tribunals of arbitration. International mediators. They'll need to take into account the universal laws as well as the human.

I think a new world court is in order, following legal rules that I don't believe have even been formulated yet.

Armies need to be converted into peacekeeping forces, there to avoid war not to serve it ... and to explore the cosmos.

All of this is going ahead, behind the scenes, according to Plan. What we can do is to add our prayers, meditations, and transmissions of love to the collective consciousness.

I'm becoming more and more convinced that that creates a climate of opinion, an environment of sentiment weighted in the direction of peace and love, that is sensed rather than known.

I think we'll find that we're indeed the hundred monkeys of collective consciousness that can shift public opinion and generate the collective will to have peace on Earth.

Thank you again for participating in Global Peace and Love Week. Let our combined work go forth into the collective consciousness and inspire peaceful thoughts and intentions in many around the globe.

Please join us 8PM (your time), every night if you can, for this last meditation of Global Peace and Love Week, for 8 minutes, to allow Archangel Michael's Blue Breath of Peace to pass through us to humanity. . .

Stand or sit, it matters not. . .

We are opening our hearts like magnificent French doors to receive and surrender to his Blue Breeze of Peace. "When there are billions holding the energy of the only acceptable reality being peace and love, then peace will reign." Archangel Michael
